Tory May Stall Shares

Tory leader Vic Stephens is considering Supreme Court action to stall the government's $3 million expenditure to distribute free shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp.

At a press conference today, Stephens said the special cabinet order approving the expenditures is a flagrant and dishonest abuse of parliament.

Quoting from the Financial Control Act, Stephens noted such special spending warrants can only be made when the expenditure is both unforeseen and urgently and immediately required for the public good.

The Tory leader said that for Finance Minister Evan Wolfe to suggest that this expenditure was not foreseen is either an admission of complete ignorance concerning the distribution of the BCRIC shares, or a deliberate intention to mislead the taxpayers of B.C.

The spending authorization is one of the most dictatorial acts we have seen since the signing of the Magna Carta, Stephens said.

Stephen, a lawyer, says he has two other lawyers researching the cabinet order.

If they support his findings he will challenge the order in Supreme Court.

The Oak Bay MLA said the money is not urgently and immediately required for the public good but is urgently and immediately needed by Premier Bill Bennett to promote "his purely political scheme to attempt to bribe the voters prior to the general election."

ANTI-SEALERS DYE PUPS RED

SEAFRONT STROLL on a sunshine day lifts the spirit, brightens the eye and more importantly, gets moms and toddlers out of the house. Walkers are shown wending way around curving steps at Clover point off Dallas Road in kind of weather that screams that spring, if not here yet, is just around corner.

HALIFAX (CP) — Fisheries officers and RCMP clashed violently on the Gulf of St. Lawrence with seal hunt protesters who had painted seal pups with dye early today.

Eight of the protesters were taken in custody aboard a Coast Guard icebreaker.

Stan Dudka, Canadian fisheries officer in charge of the seal hunt in the area, said he had been struck on the head by one individual who carried a stick "about six miles long."

Dudka said his head was swollen but neither he nor anybody else was seriously hurt in the clash.

He said the protesters had put up "fanatical resistance" when the Canadian enforcement authorities, including eight members of the RCMP, attempted to arrest them on the ice.

He said some of the protesters have been charged with resisting arrest and some of them with carrying concealed weapons.

One man carried a knife in a sheath but it was not used in the scuffle.

The protesters slipped over the side of the trawler Sea Shepherd before dawn to dye the pelts of the seals in an effort to render them worthless to seal hunters.

Dudka said Capt. L. Fewfter of the Sea Shepherd, about two miles from the seal herd, had been warned that he had put people over the side to commit violations of Canadian law and that he was in Canadian territorial waters.

"I warned him personally that if it is repeated he and his ship will be arrested."

Dudka said Fewfter acknowledged the message but did not indicate his intentions.

Dudka said he was not certain yet what would be done with the eight who had been arrested.

He said the Canadian authorities waited until the protesters were within a half a mile of the sealing operations, a violation of Canadian law for those not carrying special permits, before moving against them.

"We timed it."

He said that seal hunters and protesters at no time came into direct contact with each other.

Besides the eight Mounties involved, several Quebec provincial fisheries officers and five federal officers were involved in the arrest.

Well-known U.S. writer Cleveland Amory, one of the leaders of the protest group, said a number of men slipped over the side of the Sea Shepherd shortly after midnight, approached the Harp seal herd and applied bright-red, organic dye to the backs and rumps of the white-coated pups.

In Ottawa, Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said he has no authority to stop the Sea Shepherd from its voyage. He told the Commons the ship has the right of innocent passage and Canadian authorities could interfere with the ship only if she interferes with the hunt.

Horner Slaloms On PM's Ski Trip

OTTAWA (CP) — Tourism Minister Jack Horner suggested to jeering opposition MPs Thursday that Prime Minister Trudeau had to ski at Vail, Colo., at Christmas because there are not enough ski resorts in Canada.

Watched by a smiling prime minister, he also set off jeers in his old party when he implied that Opposition Leader Joe Clark is not doing his job as MP for Rocky Mountain, Alta., in supporting resort development.

Replying to a suggestion from Conservative John Crosbie that Trudeau's American skiing is sinful when Canada suffered its largest-ever travel deficit last year, the minister said:

"What is sinful about it is that in Canada we have not developed enough ski resorts to keep people . . ." The rest of his words were drowned by hoots and desk-thumping.

Liberals went into spasms of laughter, as Clark sought to reply. Later he demanded the government establish clearly whether national parks are meant for commercial uses or for preservation of the environment.

He got an acknowledgement from Hugh Faulkner, minister in charge of parks, that government policy is for most ski developments to be outside parks.

2 New Mishaps in Fish Fleet

One man is missing and an 80-foot fishing vessel was abandoned after it began taking on water early today in the two latest mishaps in the 1979 herring roe season.

Shortly after midnight Norman Puglas, 30, of Campbell River, fell over the side of a skiff from a 55-foot boat working in Barkley Sound.

The weather was reported good at the time.

A search was underway today involving the Canadian Coast Guard lifeboat from Bamfield, a Canadian armed forces Labrador helicopter, based at Tofino for the herring season, and the RCMP patrol vessel from Ucluelet.

The second incident occurred about 5 a.m. when the 80-foot Carina I began taking on water near Carmanah Point in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

The seven persons aboard abandoned ship and were taken aboard the fishing vessel Quesnel Lake. They were later transported to Port San Juan by skiff. There were no injuries and their names are also being withheld.

Meanwhile, the fisheries vessel Tanu was ordered to the scene to put extra pumps aboard.

A Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre spokesman said it is expected the Carina I will be salvaged.

In a related development, fisheries department officials are attempting to salvage a herring spawning study halted the day after it began when the boat carrying researchers caught fire and burned to the waterline.

Five persons, including the boat's owners and three researchers from the Nanaimo Biological Station, were forced to flee in a lifeboat when fire broke out in the engine room of the Point Hope.

There were no injuries.

The fire destroyed $50,000 worth of federal research equipment.

Alan Hourston, head of the Pacific Biological Station's herring program, said attempts will be made to carry out as much of the study as possible.

The purpose of the study was to develop improved ways of estimating the number of spawners in the herring stock.

Two More Banks Bombed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two more Vancouver-area banks were hit by similar firebombing attacks early today bringing the number of such incidents in the last three months to 22.

A Bank of Nova Scotia branch at 20555 56th Ave. in Langley was attacked shortly after midnight when a rock was thrown through a window and followed by a bomb.

But a passerby spotted the fire and alerted firemen quickly. Langley RCMP said damage was minimal.

The other attack occurred in Vancouver about two hours later at the Royal Bank of Canada branch in a shopping mall at 370 East Broadway. A front window in the bank was smashed and again followed by a firebomb. A passing policeman called firemen and there was little damage.

Dief to Pole

OTTAWA (CP) — Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker says he is planning a trip to the North Pole after the next election.

The 83-year-old Tory MP told an open-line radio program , "That's one place I've always wanted to see . . . not that there's very much to see."

Still Snags, Says Carter

ALEXANDRIA (AP) — Presidents Carter of the United States and Anwar Sadat of Egypt held talks during a train ride along the Nile delta today, but appeared no closer to a breakthrough toward an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

Sadat said he is ready to sign such a treaty, but that Israeli misunderstandings and mistrust block the way. He said that only "some words here or there" now separate Egypt and Israel.

In Israel, Prime Minister Menachem Begin spent three hours briefing his cabinet and said afterward: "Everything now depends on the Egyptian answer. Israel has done its part."

The Israeli cabinet has already accepted compromise suggestions offered by Carter, but Sadat is seeking some modifications. Carter is to relay Sadat's response to Begin on Saturday night.

Begin told a parliamentary committee that a positive response from Sadat would "pave the road to peace," but a negative response would be "Egypt's responsibility."

Carter, speaking to reporters as he and Sadat rode an open railway car from Cairo to this ancient port city, said: "We still have some problems, obviously."

But Carter said the talks are going "very well."

Said Sadat: "I'm doing my best. But without the intensive effort by President Carter and the American people . . . we would have never reached a position (in which a treaty is within reach)."

Meanwhile in Lebanon, leftist gunmen enforced a general strike in Moslem areas of the capital of Beirut to protest Carter's trip.

It's a Phoney Issue, Williams Tells Labor

Labor Minister Allan Williams said today the B.C. Federation of Labor's repeated claim he would like right-to-work legislation is a phoney issue.

The minister, under fire over a letter he wrote to Missouri asking about the defeat of a right-to-work law in that state, said federation president Jim Kinnaird is attempting to politicize the trade union movement in a way his predecessor never imagined.

The minister was responding to charges by Kinnaird that the Socred government has definite plans to bring in right to work legislation.

Kinnaird said the letter Williams wrote to Missouri is proof the Socreds have a similar plan for B.C.

Williams says he has repeatedly insisted the government is not designing, planning or even discussing such legislation.

Williams said he is practically and philisophically opposed to right to work legislation.

He said in the 75 years there has been a labor department in B.C., there have always been rights for workers to organize for the purpose of negotiating the terms of their employment with their employers.

"And the successes that have been achieved are very valuable to the working men and women of the province," he added.

Williams said the blame for all the controversy surrounding right to work lies directly on the shoulders of Kinnaird whose recent election to head the federation was heralded as the beginning of a new era of moderation in the labor movement.

Williams said Kinnaird should know better because

H-Bomb Article Called Explosive

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government says that publication of a magazine article entitled How a Hydrogen Bomb Works might cause "grave, direct, immediate and irreparable harm to the national security of the United States and its people."

The justice department said today that it has filed a civil suit in Madison, Wis., federal court to prevent The Progressive magazine from publishing the article.

Court documents supplied by the justice department said: "The article provides specific and detailed information concerning the design and operation of a hydrogen bomb, and certain technical information necessary to construct such a bomb."

Publication of the information "would increase the proliferation of nuclear weapons, and thereby severely undercut the arms-control and disarmament policies of the United States," said the government's suit.

The suit says that publication of the article is "imminent" unless a temporary restraining order is granted by the court.

Named as defendants are the the magazine's parent firm in Madison, The Progressive Inc.; Erwin Knoll, the magazine's editor; Samuel Day, managing editor, and Howard Morland, the author of the article.

Knoll said in Madison that he has not seen the suit yet and his lawyer advised him not to answer questions about it. But he said his lawyer told him the government was planning some sort of "prior restraint."

Day also declined to comment directly on the suit.

The magazine, with a circulation of about 40,000, had planned to print the article in its April issue, due to be published next week, the editors said.

The government said the "secret restricted data" in the article, if published, "will increase the number of nations capable of constructing thermonuclear weapons and decrease the time it takes for these nations to develop such weapons."

The suit said the energy department received a copy of the article Feb. 27, with a cover letter from Day asking the department to "verify the technical accuracy of the information contained in the article."

An affadavit filed with the suit said Lynn Coleman, energy department general counsel, telephoned Day and Knoll asking that the article not be published.

The court papers said energy department officials also met with Knoll and Day and offered to help them edit the article so that sensitive data would not be disclosed.

But the affadavit said Gordon Sinykin, lawyer for the magazine, replied Wednesday that the magazine intended to publish the article.

Impartial N-Use Inquiry Eyed to Clear the Air

VANCOUVER (CP) — A federal inquiry into the use of nuclear power in Canada is likely to be recommended Saturday by the national committee on nuclear issues, the committee's co-chairman said Thursday.

Dr. J. M. Harrison said he is skeptical about the value of an inquiry but added it appears to be the only way information on the controversial issue can be dispensed to the public in a calm and uncolored fashion.

Environmentalists at a conference here have repeatedly called for an inquiry, saying the committee is pro-nuclear and has not accurately presented the risks of nuclear energy to health.

Harrison said in an interview he is disappointed with the committee's hearings across Canada because anti- and pro-nuclear forces are so polarized and refuse to listen to each other.

The committee, co-sponsored by the national Science Council and the Royal Society of Canada, received $200,000 last year from the federal government to inform the public about the advantages and disadvantages of nuclear energy.

But he said the public hearings have been plagued by people "who only see the disadvantages and people who only see the advantages of nuclear energy."

During the second day of the hearings Thursday, environmentalists criticized pro-nuclear scientists for using what they said are inaccurate statistics to prove nuclear power is the safest of all energy forms.

Dr. Herbert Inhaber, a panelist and nuclear physicist, told the audience of 250 that solar and wind power are among the riskiest of energy forms in terms of loss of lives and man-hours in constructing the massive collectors needed.

Anti-nuclear spokesmen said that Inhaber, commissioned to do a report for the Atomic Energy Board of Canada last year, grossly distorted figures from a California professor's report to back his claims.

Ontario MDs Draw Trudeau Warning

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said today the federal government will have to review its payments towards medical care programs run by the provinces if the principles of universal availability are undermined.

Trudeau was questioned in the Commons by Ed Broadbent, who said doctors in Ontario are withdrawing from the 11-year-old federal-provincial health insurance program and boosting fees by 25 to 30 per cent. This threatens to cut people out of the tax-backed program, he said.

The prime minister said the medical care plan is "basic and essential" in Canadian society and is "based on the principle of universality and accessibility."

"If anything is done by any province to go away from those principles, we will have to review the high payments the federal government is handing out to the provinces for half the share and the costs of medicare."

Stiff Jolt

TEHRAN (UPI) — An earthquake measuring 4.9 on the Richter scale jolted a tremor-prone northeastern region of Iran early today, Tehran's central geophysical centre reported.

There were no immediate reports of casualties or damage in the area, swept by snowstorms and icy winds for several days.

The tremor struck the area stretching from Bojnord, near the Soviet border.

ICBC Broke Code Says Rights Prober

A human rights board of inquiry has ruled the Insurance Corp. of B.C. contravened the provincial Human Rights Code by cancelling the insurance of a Sidney man charged with trafficking in marijuana.

The one-man board, composed of Leon Getz, former B.C. Law Reform Commission head, ordered the corporation to refrain from similar contraventions in future.

Getz said that the corporation's decision to cancel was at best a theological judgment, a matter of faith or belief, and at worst, a reflection of naked prejudice.

The man involved, Robert Heerspink, was the registered owner of a fourplex and a triplex in Sidney, on which ICBC had issued a composite mercantile insurance policy.

A Victoria newspaper reported April 24, 1976, that Heerspink had been committed for trial on a charge of trafficking in marijuana.

On June 16, 1976, the corporation sent Heerspink a registered letter, saying his insurance would be cancelled in 15 days.

No reasons for cancellation were given.

Heerspink subsequently was convicted and fined on charges of possession and trafficking. He also obtained replacement insurance from another company.

The Crown corporation argued throughout the hearing that it was a test case of the scope of the code, and its application to the insurance industry.

"This is a landmark decision and what it achieves is that protection against unreasonable discrimination now extends to the field of insurance," said Kathleen Ruff, director of the human rights branch.

Real Crime Tip-Off In Whodunnit Play

It wasn't in the script, but off-duty sheriff's deputy Stan Yurkiewicz got the message. Cast members presenting Agatha Christie's play The Hollow in Orlando, Fla., received urgent telephone calls asking that Yurkiewicz be notified of an emergency. Rather than disrupt the performance, the actors improvised these lines: "Oh, by the way, has Inspector Thorpe left yet?" "Yes, he has," another performer answered. "Oh, that's a pity. I have a message for him from Captain Yurkiewicz that his mother-in-law's home was broken into and she needed to get in touch with him right away."

A third Socred MLA is bowing out of politics. Vancouver South's Gerry Strongman has notified the Socred constituency association he will not be seeking reelection. His decision apparently stems from his desire to devote more time to the family's paint business. Ray Loewen (Burnaby-Edmonds) and George Haddad (Kootenay) earlier announced their intention to retire.

The deputy sheriff on duty near Salinas, Calif., needed just a few quiet moments to answer a call of nature. But the outhouse was attached to a bus, and a surprise bouncy ride gave the deputy a case of badly bruised, er, pride. The bus driver, unaware the little trailer was occupied by Gordon Sonne, drove across a bumpy field to pick up a group of farm workers. When the bus stopped, the driver heard loud pounding from inside the trailer and found the policeman.

Former West German chancellor Willy Brandt and his Norwegian-born wife, Rut, have begun divorce proceedings, his office announced Thursday. The announcement gave no reason for the divorce after almost 31 years of marriage.

Former president Nikolai Podgorny, for 13 years one of the most powerful men in the Soviet Union, is no longer a member of parliament, election lists published in official newspapers show. Soviet and Western sources said this means Podgorny, dumped without explanation from the politburo two years ago, now is expected to disappear into the oblivion that envelops high officials who fall from power.

John Rideout, acquitted in a widely publicized trial of raping his wife, says her decision to file for divorce two months after their reconciliation is "the final straw." 'House Arrest' Sentence

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Found guilty of killing her drunk gun-toting husband in a kitchen scuffle two years ago, Rebecca Brown is serving time for involuntary manslaughter — at home.

Mrs. Brown, a 46-year-old vocational nurse, is the first person sentenced to "house arrest" under an experimental program in Alameda County which officials say is unique in the United States.

Under her sentence of one-year probation, Mrs. Brown continues to work and lives at home, but she must report to a probation officer twice each weekday for the next year. She cannot leave town and cannot leave her home on weekends.

Spawned as a cost-cutting measure, the program is intended to save the county the $6,500 annual cost of keeping a prisoner in jail.

"It's the first time that I know of that house arrest has been used in the United States in a routine criminal case," says Joseph Bort, a lawyer and county supervisor who thought of the idea a few months ago.

Bort got approval from fellow supervisors to set up a study committee. The Brown case was the first in which "house arrest" has been put to test.

Women Marchers Stoned For Protest Against Veils

TEHRAN (UPI) — Male revolutionaries today hurled stones and insults at 1,000 Iranian women who marched in protest against Ayatollah Khomeini's command they don veils and adhere to the strict tenets of Islam.

While the struggle over women's rights flared at Tehran University, Prime Minister Mehdi Bazargan was reported to be forcing a confrontration with the 78-year-old ayatollah for greater control over revolutionary groups in Iran.

Bazargan's labor minister, Dariush Foruhar said Khomeini "still supports the government" — an indication that Bazargan had pushed through his demands for more control of the revolutionaries' "parallel government."

The 71-year-old premier met with Khomeini in his home city of Qom, south of tehran, Thursday and again today, sources close to Bazargan said.

They said Bazargan had threatened to resign but was "in a position to push through (his demands) without having to quit." They did not elaborate.

An estimated 1,000 women, some chain-smoking in defiance of Khomeini's orders to restore Islamic morality to Iran, gathered at Tehran University today for a protest meeting, the second feminist protest gathering since Thursday's celebration of International Women's Day was cancelled.

The protesters shouted, "We condemn all forms of repression" and "We shall not let anyone turn us into slaves in the name of democracy."

The protesters then began to march, but were intercepted by revolutionaries and other Khomeini supporters who taunted the women and, as tension grew between the two groups, threw stones.

There were no immediate reports of casualties.

Revolutionaries Thursday opened fire to disperse women demonstrators who marched on Bazargan's offices in the first incident of its kind since Khomeini overthrew the shah in a bloody struggle last month.

Three more former policemen under the regime of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi were executed today by firing squad, bringing to 44 the number of victims of revolutionary courts.

PORT MORESBY, Papua New Guinea (Reuter) — Two volcanologists were killed by an eruption of the Karkar volcano in Papua New Guinea, the Rabaul observatory said.

U.S. Air, Sea Presence Boost in Saudi Arabia

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Carter administration has ordered several U.S.-piloted airborne command posts to Saudi Arabia in its most decisive demonstration so far of determination to counter Soviet moves against neighboring North Yemen, sources reported Thursday.

The advanced Airborne Warning and Control Systems (AWACS) aircraft have the capability to direct fighter plane assaults and to monitor flights by enemy planes such as the Soviet Mig-21s that North Yemen claims have flown raids against it from South Yemen.

A Pentagon spokesman had no comment on the report.

However, the defence department Thursday began spelling out some of the details of a broad program to strengthen the U.S. air and sea presence in the area at a time when Saudi Arabia, the world's leading oil exporter, feels threatened by the rapidly moving developments around it.

Defence department spokesman Thomas Ross said the United States has offered to send an armed squadron of F-15s to Saudi Arabia on a temporary basis and is considering establishing a permanent fleet in the Indian Ocean. The aircraft carrier Constellation, accompanied by a guided missile destroyer and a guided missile cruiser, left the Philippines Wednesday night en route to "operations" in the Arabian Sea, the Pentagon said.

Aboard the Constellaiton are approximately 5,000 men and 80 aircraft, including F-14 fighters, which have a range of 750 miles.

Oil Hike Spreading

Associated Press

Oil-exporting states that took advantage of Iran's revolt by quickly raising the price of their oil seem to be settling on an increase of about nine per cent — more than twice the rise planned for April 1.

After a round of independent price increases of varying sizes, several of the states that raised prices are adjusting the size of the jumps so there is some uniformity.

The favored number appears to be nine per cent, or $1.20 more than the base price of $13.35 a barrel set by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC). Iraq and Kuwait are at that level already, and now Abu Dhabi and Libya, which had put through smaller increases earlier, have apparently changed their minds and gone with the higher number, sources said.

Chinese Worst, Say Viets

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam, disputing China's contention that it is withdrawing troops from Vietnam, said today the Chinese invaders are "worse than the French and Americans" who fought in Vietnam.

China said the Vietnamese are shelling and harassing its forces as they withdrew from northern Vietnam.

Hanoi Radio, which earlier this week confirmed the Chinese withdrawal, said in a broadcast monitored here that China is planning to "rotate" its troops rather than withdraw them. Hanoi demanded an "immediate, complete and unconditional" pullout.

The Hanoi broadcast reiterated Vietnam's accusation of Chinese war crimes, saying Peking's soldiers are burning homes, destroying communication lines and stealing everything in sight "even women's underwear." Hanoi promised to crush the Chinese if they are using a purported "withdrawal as a smokescreen."

Western analysts were divided. One Indochina watcher in Bangkok said the fighting is minor and the Vietnamese are allowing the Chinese to withdraw peacefully. Another source said sharp clashes are still going on in some frontier areas, including Lang Son, Dong Dang, Cam Duong and Phuc Hua.

The latest battle report from Hanoi said Chinese artillery lobbed about 1,000 rounds against Lang Son and the surrounding area Thursday.

Get It Over With

Canada's longest ever election campaign continues to drag on. Effectively, the country has been in a state of election preparedness for almost a year with scares and alarums at every twitch of the Gallup poll.

The latest word from the prime minister is that he is not likely to delay actually calling the election past June 30.

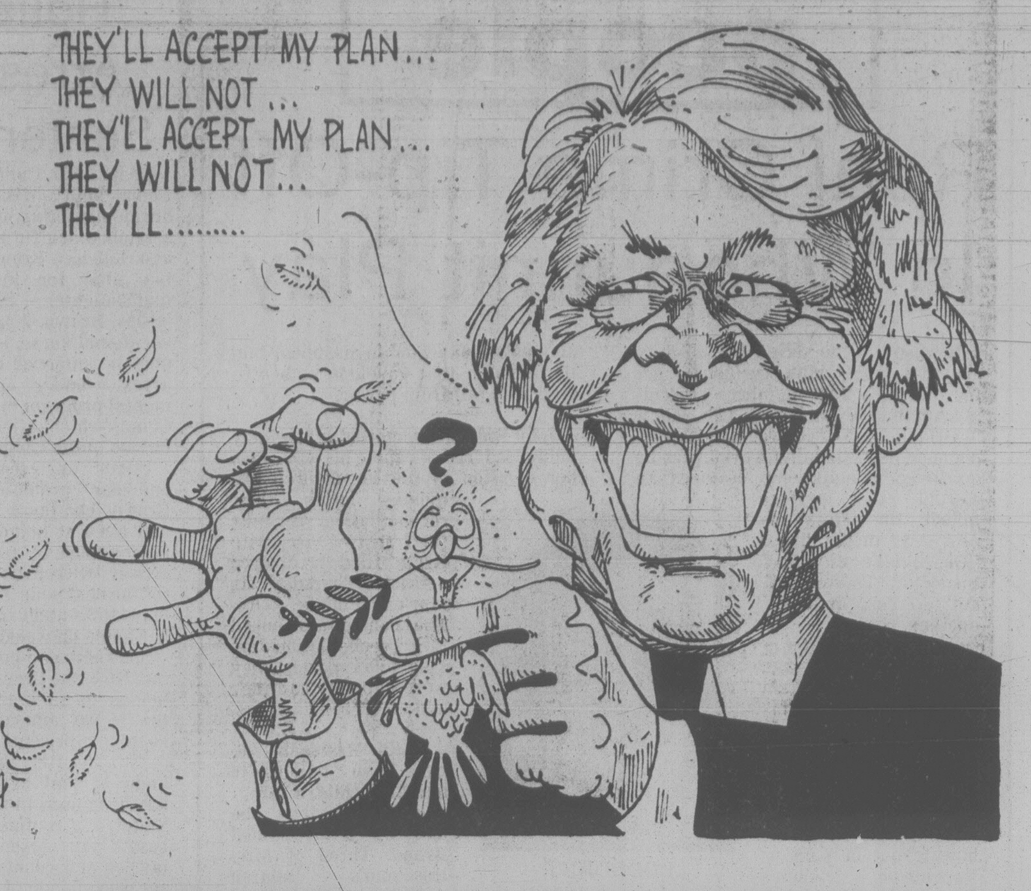
With that press conference announcement, he denied the rumors which are starting to spread about his supposed secret plans to suspend the constitution — and the need for any more elections.

Such reports of course are ridiculous, but even denials give a kind of credibility. And Prime Minister Trudeau's procrastination as the end of his traditional five-year mandate approaches only encourages such speculation among the wilder fringe elements of Canadian politics.

His delays risk damaging the essential fabric of the Canadian compromise. If there are differences which separate Canadians, at least we all agree that elections are the way to settle them.

The election has been hanging fire so long that many people have just given up and gone home. Some excellent candidates who were nominated almost a year ago have decided to cut their losses; if they aren't sitting MPs or independently wealthy they can't afford to wait out the prime minister. Economist Pat Carney for the Tories and Liberal Maurice Strong are two candidates who would have been assets on either side of the House of Commons. Their decisions to renounce their candidacies because of the pressures of business means our loss.

Canadians have waited long enough for an election. They have endured so many dress rehearsals of opening night they can repeat the basic speeches with the principal performers. On with the show; the sooner the better.



THEY'LL ACCEPT MY PLAN...
THEY WILL NOT...

The Right to Reply

The way legislation is being thrown pell mell into the House of Commons these days, there is probably no chance that Liberal MP Robert Kaplan's private member's bill will ever receive a decent hearing, let alone become law. It is a pity. His bill to establish a Journal of Public Comment would be a sensible reform.

It would provide a repository for replies and rebuttals from those people referred to in a Commons debate, journal or other record of Parliament who considered they had been misquoted or misrepresented.

Kaplan's bill would not end the casual defamation of character that sometimes occurs in the Commons, the distortion for partisan purposes of the views or opinions of one group or another, the careless use of another's research or writings, the blackening of reputations that would be cause for libel suits outside Parliament. But at least the innocent bystanders would have a forum of redress.

Such a journal would be a useful adjunct to Hansard, but would not tamper with Hansard's role as the record of parliamentary proceedings. The Americans have a simple way of dealing with the problem. The Congressional Record is not, as its name would suggest, merely a record of debate in the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives. It is a repository for whatever a congressman desires to be printed, speeches he never gave, handouts from a lobbyist or letters from constituents, hometown newspaper editorials and magazine articles expressing an admired point of view. In effect, each congressman is also an editor.

An association or individual taking offence at some legislator's remark prevails upon a friendly solon to insert a rebuttal into the Record. Of course, this makes for a grossly swollen publication and a cumbersome record of legislative deliberations.

Kaplan's scheme would establish a separate publication to receive such material under the authority of the clerk of the House of Commons.

In politics, the clarifications and corrections never get as much attention as the original sensational charges but the publication suggested by Kaplan would at least provide a record of a dissident's point of view.

A Demolition Job on CSIP

Chretien gives NCI chairman Harold Renouf his orders.

OTTAWA — Would you like to know why the prices of shoes and of many types of clothing are soaring? Would you be interested in understanding why it is that the price of hotel rooms is so much higher in Canada than in the U.S.?

Are you a wine drinker, and if so do you have any interest in learning why wine prices are so exorbitantly high? Are you a homeowner, and if so would you like to know about the effect of today's high interest rates upon mortgage costs?

I just cannot believe that most readers would not be interested in most of these topics, nor indeed in all of them. The government believes this as well, which is why it has just made certain that you will not learn anything about any of them.

These subjects, as well as others like base metals markets and the international system for pricing wheat, which although one step removed from every day life have as much effect upon the prices of goods and services that you buy, all were being researched by, or were about to be researched by, the Centre for the Study of Inflation and Productivity. The results of these studies would have been published within the next six months.

Off-Limits for CSIP

Goodbye to all that. At a press conference last week, where he announced the abolition of CSIP and its replacement by the National Commission on Inflation, Finance Minister Jean Chretien said with a more-or-less straight face, that the reason for the switch was to give the new agency, "more power to do the job." This additional power, Chretien explained, involved giving the new agency the right, which CSIP lacked, to order corporations and unions to hand over information about prices, profits and wages.

In the Commons, opposition MPs attacked the new inflation-monitoring agency as "toothless" and as a "pre-election gimmick." These criticisms were right on. But they were off the point. Certainly the new inflation commission indeed will be "toothless" because, like its predecessor CSIP, it will lack the power to order rollbacks of excessive price increases or wage settlements. The real "gimmick," though, is that the inflation commission has been given additional power that it doesn't need — only two of 190 firms refused CSIP's request for information — as a way of disguising the fact that it has been given a much smaller job to do.

In three ways, the government has reduced the scope of its inflation monitoring program. Reduced it in fact to a joke:

☐ CSIP was independent. It was attached to the Economic Council which reports directly to parliament. The new inflation commission is a creature of the government. It reports to Chretien, who will read its studies before they are made public.

☐ CSIP's horizons were unlimited. Because it was established jointly by the provinces and Ottawa, it could (and did in the case of electricity rates for instance) study inflationary price changes caused by provincial decisions. The inflation commission, because it was set up by Ottawa alone, will have to get the approval of the provinces before looking over their shoulders.

☐ CSIP's mandate was broader. It was set up both to "monitor" changes in prices and wage settlements and to study the structure of industries — everything from shoes to wines that is — to uncover the root causes ofinflation. The role of the inflationcCommission is simply to be a "monitor." No studies about wines, or shoes, or the base metals market, in other words.

"What sddens me," Economic Council chairman Sylvia Ostry told me in an interview, "is that we've been killed just when we were gaining momentum."

As much as the opposition MPs did, Ostry has missed the point. CSIP was killed precisely because it was just beginning to gain momentum.

Started last fall, CSIP started slowly, as most new agencies do — Beryl Plumptre's Food Prices Review Board for example. Then it began to take hold.

Chretien's Friends

Last fall, CSIP criticized the government's settlement with the letter carriers as "excessive." That was its first mistake. A month ago, it criticized food industry profits as "excessive." That was its second mistake. Then it began to look at the causes of inflation industry by industry. The government-subsidized dairy industry, CSIP concluded, was turning out products at twice the international price. This was its third, and terminal, mistake.

Agencies set up by government which criticize the government have limited life prospects. Agencies which criticize business on the eve of an election in which the government is seeking business votes have just signed their own death warrant.

In the end, the highest praise for CSIP came from its enemies. The day after CSIP died, the Retail Council of Canada expressed "satisfaction" while the Grocery Products Manufacturers "applauded." Now that you know who are the friends of Chretien's new National Commission on Inflation, you'll be able to guess who its only enemy will be — you.

Bennett's Legacy

As the countless tributes pour in to the memory of the late Premier W. A. C. Bennett, there is little doubt of the great esteem he was held in, even by his political foes. Historians of British Columbia doubtless will class him as the statesman of the 20th century, as Sir James Douglas was the statesman of the 19th century.

Ferries, highways, power projects, industrial development, plus many more are his contribution to society. However, we did have all these things before in a much lesser way, but what we did not have before his terms of office was the homeowners grant. It was indeed the brainchild of the former premier.

When first introduced it was attacked by the then CCF opposition as "buying votes with the people's own money" and the CCF vowed if elected they would remove it. But what happened when the NDP came to power in 1972? Did they abolish it? No, they even increased it.

The homeowner grant is now used in many parts of the continent. From the modest sum of $15 that it was at the begining, it has now grown to a whopping $480, for the old age pensioner, and with a provincial elecion in the offing, it is almost sure to be increased again this year. It has done much to curtail the demand for a California Propsition 13 in B.C.

When homeowers pay their taxes this year, and claim their homeowners grant, they could offer a silent prayer of thanks to the memory of W. A. C. Bennett, the man whose vision and action has saved the little people, the homeowers, many millions of dollars over a quarter of a century from the implentation of the homeowners grant. — Alf Flett, Nanaimo.

Iran's Policies

Having been to Iran on two occasions while en route to India, I am appalled at the situation in that country which forced the shah to leave his country, thus ending a dynasty which has lasted for over 2,500 years. I am also appalled at the Ayatollah Khomeini's ruthless execution of several Iranian military leaders and also of his intention to adopt the Koranic law of cutting off the hands of thieves. I would suggest to him that apart from the meanness and cruelty of such acts that it would be better for a thief to have the use of all his limbs to enable to compensate the victim of his theft, but also to give to those in need!

However, I have to hand it to the Ayatollah for breaking off diplomatic relations with the Zionist state of Israel and for cutting off oil supplies to that state. On the other hand, I deplore his decision to treat South Africa in a similar manner. We in the west should do everything in our power to help not only South Africa, but also the Smith regime in Rhodesia, as South Africa and Rhodesia are bulwarks against communism in that continent. As far as apartheid is concerned, that is South Africa's business, and she knows better than outsiders how to run her own affairs.

If the ayatollah is opposed to communism, as he claims to be, then he should help South Africa and Rhodesia as much as possible. — Richard D. Corrance, 710 Cormorant Street.

Work Is Picking Up

"Daffodil Pickers Wanted." Come on all you hippies and welfare bums, here's a chance for you to do some honest work. Why, Mr. Vantreight is willing to pay you a whole $2.75 an hour (that's if you're over 18 — kids get less).

"Not minimum wages?" you say. Sorry duckies, farm labor does not come under the minimum wage law. Why not, farm laborers have to eat and have shelter the same as mail room clerks?

I had heard from an associate about this particular help wanted ad and the low wage offered, so I phoned the farm labor pool to find out for myself. The job pays $2.75 per hour. You must be at a pickup location on Tindel Avenue by 7 a.m. You are driven from there to the fields. You start work at 7:30 a.m. and work till 5 p.m. with half an hour for lunch which you must provide yourself (if you can afford it). There are no coffee breaks.

But its good honest work, uplifting to both body and soul . . . isn't it? — David Gallant, Victoria.

Fragile Resources

It is curious that people should be concerned about non-renewable resources, since there has never been a failure of these in the world's history, whereas renewable resources have failed in the past, and are failing even at this very moment in some part of the world.

Every cubic mile of the earth contains about 100 years supply of metals. With about 110 million cubic miles of the earth available for mining, enough's said on metals.

With regard to oil and gas, we simply don't know, and unless the petroleum industry is allowed to look, find and sell, we never will. Indications are that there are hundreds if not thousands of years supply, and conditions in 2979 may be as different as 979 is from today.

It's the renewable resources that are "fragile." If all the seal pups in the hunt were killed every year, the seal herds would soon cease to exist.

Apart from the purely politically induced shortages of oil and gas, among other things, we can bet the world will run out of such renewable resources as water and food, long before we run out of oil and gas. The U.S. and Canada have wasted 5½ years since 1973. Its high time the dead hand of politicians got off industry's back and allowed it to find and sell all it can.—James P. Thornton, 943 Wilmer, Street.

The Tibet Film

On March 5, the China-Canada Friendship Association sponsored a documentary film on Tibet. I saw the film and wish to express my appreciation of the association's efforts.

Although I am a poor student of the Chinese and Tibetan cultures, I feel that I must certanly take exception to the film. Felix Greene's film on Tibet is obviously yet another aspect of a form of propaganda strongly favouring the communist Chinese and should be recognized as such.

In view of the discussion that ensued following the showing of the film, there appear to be a number of people in our community who are misinformed about Tibet. I do not wish to exchange Chinese propaganda for Tibetan propaganda, for that would serve no purpose.

All that I ask of those who saw the film and were impressed by the general line of reasoning presented by Felix Greene, and of the reading public who are concerned over the fate of minority peoples the world over, is that they investigate the situation in Tibet, then and now, and try to arrive at the facts of the issue.

For Tibet is still an issue, and the Tibet question has not yet been resolved. — David Bartell, 101-2790 Cedar Hill Road.

Gas Glee

The current report on gas reserves, exports, and so on (New Gas Report Big Dollar Boost; Times, March 1) and the glee of the oil companies in hearing the news give food for serious thought.

This is really one of the most blatant examples of the idiocy of the "free enterprise" concept and of those who, in the face of many similar, if not so serious situations, support it.

With the world (which is not a globe, but a community of billions of people) running out of oil why are a few oil barons and private multinationals in control of one of our most important natural resources for?

They are rubbing their hands in glee with the news they can export more, expand more and generally speed up the day when there will be none solely for lining their own pockets. Every decision to produce, export, drill, save or waste is made, not for the people's good and future generations, but for profit!

Socialism would eliminate all this Russian roulette wih our resources and protect them in the interests of all the people alive and yet to come. — P. Simpson, 2536 Forbes Street.

Thievery on Ferries

Tourist Minister Elwood Veitch's proposal to boycott merchants who fail to pay the correct exchange rate on United States currency definitely possesses merit.

However, I think Mr. Veitch should have first examined the British Columbia Ferry Corp. which on Jan. 28, was offering the unbelievably low exchange rate of 13 per cent on the U.S. dollar. This was six cents below the official bank rate of $1.19.

Mr. Veitch was correct when he said: "This practice of fleecing our guests when they are in a situation where they have no alternatives is just plain thievery."

The corporation's attitude towards a fair exchange rate on its ferries is that it accepts U.S. funds only as a favor to our guests. Through some misplaced arrogance it feels obligated to reassess the exchange rate only from time to time and to keep it in line not with the official bank rate, but with other shore-based establishments who may or may not offer a fair rate of exchange.

There is absolutely no excuse for the "thievery" on the ferries nor is there a legitimate excuse for the ferry corp. not reassessing the exchange rate daily or at least weekly, in order it be kept in line with the official bank rate. — David Anderson, Victoria.

Waste of Money

I recently received a letter from the premier's office informing me and all the citizens of British Columbia how fortunate we are to be eligible to obtain five shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp.

When he uses government stationery with the letterhead of the office of premier to further his own Social Credit party's political ends he is abusing his position as premier.

The cost of the stationery, the preparation and mailing costs of this political propaganda to every citizen in B.C., many of whom are already fed up with your government's anti-people policies, is a blatant misuse of taxpayer's money.

If he wishes to put out propaganda for the Social Credit party he should do it with party funds. I do not support Social Credit and I am sure that a great many more people in the province feel as I do, that we do not wish our tax dollars spent on partisan politics.

With all govenments claiming restraint in public spending as a necessary step to good government he is setting an abominable example. — Jim McQueen, 230 Princess Avenue.

Iran Moslems Turn Clock Back

From Despot to Despot

By YOUSSEF M. IBRAHIM
New York Times

TEHRAN — Many civil libertarians here — particularly those who were active in the human rights movement that opposed the policies of the shah — have taken great exception to current summary executions after secret trials generally conducted in the middle of the night.

But a new and wider sense of alarm is spreading among Iranians with secular views, including the educated and the workers, at what they see as a trend toward a narrow interpretation of human rights defined and carried out for the benefit of orthodox Moslems and without consultation or due process of law.

Over the last few weeks, several instances of punishment by flagellation have been reported from the provinces. The punishment was ordered by religious courts that had been set up by ayatollahs or mullahs outside the framework of civil law and they were carried out, frequently on the same day they were handed down, against offenders accused of drinking liquor or stealing. All the sentences were in strict conformity with Islamic law.

Women hit

"Due process of law is what the whole Iranian revolution was about," said a 37-year-old political science professor at Tehran University as he surveyed the stream of new proclamations from the Revolutionary Council, which a few days ago said that women's service in the army contravened the spirit of Islam.

On Feb. 26, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the 78-year-old Shiite Moslem leader of Iran, dealt a heavy blow to women when he counselled the minister of justice, Assadollah Mobasheri, to review the Family Protection Act of 1975. The law had granted Iranian women the right to request divorce under certain conditions and it also restricts polygamy. The ayatollah, in a letter to the justice minister, said that all provisions of the law that "contravene Islam" should be stricken.

Islamic jurisprudence allows a man to divorce his wife unconditionally and without recourse to a court of law. Wives are not granted similar privileges, except under extreme and very complicated circumstances.

In another directive to the justice minister the same day, Khomeini urged the removal of "all European criteria built into the judicial system." In particular he demanded the swift application of justice and the elimination of appeals in the judicial process. "Every hearing must end in a final, absolute decision in a single phase," he said.

The move took Mobasheri by surprise. "In civil suits a single-phased hearing is all right," he told the daily newspaper Kayhan, "but in more serious cases, especially where a death sentence is likely, greater attention is necessary."

Two young women, both university graduates, said that they were beginning to feel betrayed by the revolution. "We supported the Imam because we believed this was a revolution that belongs to all of us," one of them said, referring to Khomeini. "Now what they are proposing is to turn this wonderful victory into a new set of restrictions on our freedom that rivals the previous regime's restrictions on political freedom."

Protests

The rising protest is no longer a murmur of the middle class or the city dwellers, who for years have taken a less rigid view of their religion without abandoning the basic tenets of Islam. The unrest includes workers in the oil fields who want to choose their leaders and participate in the national debate on the country's oil policy. And it involves white-collar workers who believe that no new laws or regulations should be passed before the country's new constitution is drafted and approved.

Many Iranians are objecting to the referendum coming up this month because they feel it to be heavily loaded in favor of an Islamic republic. The referendum asks one question: Do you prefer the monarchy or an Islamic republic?

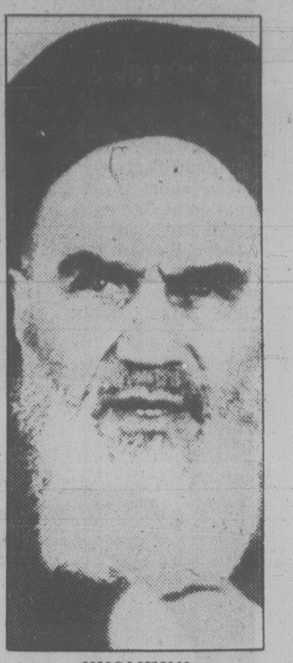
"A referendum that contains such a loaded question is no referendum," wrote a political commentator, Fariborz Atapour. "The question is: Republic, yes or no? The definition is then made by the constitution."

There is also growing concern that Iran's new constitution is being secretly drafted by a committee reportedly made up of a majority of spiritual men, ormullahs, and of conservative Iranians with deep Islamic convictions. Many argue that the constituent assembly that is to be set up should draft the constitution.

"The people did not rise and make supreme sacrifices in order to revert to another type of oppression, which bears the scent of 50 years of despotic rule," an editorial written by Janet Lazarian Shaghai in The Tehran Journal said the other day. Her criticism was focused on Sadegh Qobtzadeh, the new head of the Iranian radio and television organization, who was appointed by the revolutionary authorities.

Since Qobtzadeh took over a few weeks ago, he has banned all entertainment programs. Instead, Iranian television is filled with speeches from religious figures or speakers for the Islamic movement, and are interspersed with patriotic songs. The most popular tune is one that frequently invokes the name of God and the glories of Islam.

The opposition to Islamic control took a potentially dangerous turn Feb. 25 when a major guerrilla group, the People's Mujahadeen, which had been a prominent base of power for the Islamic movement, apparently defected. In a pointed statement, the group's leader, Massoud Rajavi, said to a large crowd of supporters in Tehran University that all those who had fought for the new order, including moderate leftists and Marxists, must have a voice in government. The group's stand brings them into line with the Marxist Fedayeen guerrillas.



KHOMEINI

Hardened

The two groups are closer to each other than they are to the leaders of the Islamic regime, being made up of university graduates hardened by years of armed struggle and underground organization. Both are a long way from the orthodox Islamic concepts advocated by the regime and its supporters among the Moslem clergy, the bazaar merchants, old politicians and newly arrived exiles who came to Iran with Khomeini after years of exile abroad.

"The clergy wanted to pick up more than they had earned, the exiles grabbed what power they could, but the Mujahedeen were left wondering where exactly they stood with guns in their hands but no articulate political power," wrote Atapour, the political commentator.

Who Will Own Canada?

By GEOFFREY STEVENS

OTTAWA — If things keep on the way they're going, I suggested, the entire country will be owned by three people. The only question is, which three?

"That's right," said a member of Parliament, a man with one of the best economic minds in the Commons. "The Bay takes over Zeller's. Simpsons tries to merge with Simpsons-Sears. Then the Bay takes over Simpsons. Then Thomson takes over the Bay. What happens next? Does Canadian Pacific, which didn't get MacMillan-Bloedel, take over Thomson, instead? I wouldn't be surprised."

The MP continued: "There's no shortage of investment capital in this country. What bothers me is the investment is going into established businesses. It's not going into building new business."

He has a point. Is anyone really benefitting from the takeover fever that is sweeping the country? Or is it simply a case of burgeoning corporate profits looking for a safe place to be spent? Is Simpsons better off being owned by the Hudson's Bay Company? Are consumers better served when the Bay (with Simpsons-Sears) controls 60 per cent of the department store business?

Will the Bay be better off if the Thomson communications conglomerate succeeds in its takeover bid? Couldn't Thomson's $366 million be more usefully and more productively invested elsewhere?

Why doesn't the government do something about it?

If this were the United States, it wouldn't be allowed to happen. Canada, of course, is different. A smaller market, a desire for economies of scale, a need to compete internationally, and a mixed economy quite unlike the Americans', all foster the development of larger units, relative to the size of the country. We end up, however, with an awkward system in which some sectors (banking, transportation, broadcasting, telecommunications) are quite tightly regulated by public authorities, while in other sectors it's hands off.

The government is concerned about takeover fever. For example, I haven't come across anyone in Ottawa who finds any public good in the Bay's takeover of Simpsons or in Thomson's proposed takeover of the Bay. And yet the fever rages out of control. There are two reasons. First, the government, approaching an election call, is exceedingly nervous about taking any action that would unsettle the business community. Second, even if it had the will, the government lacks the way.

The present Combines Investigation Act is a joke. The government has been searching for a way to preserve competition in the marketplace without offending businessmen whose interests are not necessarily served at all by open competition. It's an impossible search.

Now, the government is talking of reintroducing competition legislation. If this means resurrecting its most recent bill, the former Bill C-13, the government will anger business without significantly advancing the cause of competition. Bill C-13, which was born in 1977 and died in 1978, was a pale shadow of its ancestor, Bill C-256, of 1971.

Bill C-256 would have created a Competitive Practices Tribunal, with real powers. Any merger involving more than $5 million in gross assets or annual gross revenue would have had to be registered. The tribunal would have had the power to dissolve or modify the merger if it concluded it would significantly lessen competition.

Bill C-13, the watered-down descendant, did not require the registration of mergers. Instead, it assigned the initiative to the government to investigate and to make a case against a merger. Although the Competition Board, proposed in Bill C-13, would have had powers, they were so qualified as to seem, to a layman, almost unusable.

If, however, takeover fever continues, a tough law will be unavoidable — after the election. With any luck, though, the three people who will own Canada by then won't have transferred their holdings to the Bahamas or Liechtenstein.

In Point of Facts

russell baker

It is always dispiriting to see Kunkel walk in. Sooner rather than later you know he is going to say, "Let's look at the facts." Kunkel believes in the facts, which is all right, but he cannot understand that the facts are not everybody's cup of tea. He believes that everybody ought to look at them, no matter how dull or depressing they may be.

The idea that some people might not want to look at the facts is heresy to Kunkel. The idea that you might prefer to ignore the facts, to pretend that the facts don't exist, is close to blasphemy. He pokes his head in the door, sees you serenely pretending the facts don't exist and stabs a finger into your dreams.

"You're not looking at the facts," he says. A plea for peace — "I'm not interested in the facts today, Kunkel" — is futile. "Let's look at the facts," he says, rubbing hands in lewd anticipation of laying eyes on those tired old facts once more.

Kunkel labors under the delusion that facts pave the yellow brick road to the emerald city of Truth. The opposite proposition, that if you look at all the facts together, assembled from the corners of the universe, you might wind up in the clutches of the Wicked Witch of Utter Confusion — this idea Kunkel refuses to entertain.

This is because when Kunkel looks at the facts he looks only at the facts he wants to look at in that particular glance. And indeed, who is capable of looking at all the facts in a whole lifetime, much less in a single glance? This is why even trying to look at the facts is such a useless pastime.

When Kunkel runs into Pearson, the tedium becomes intense. Pearson is one of those people who see life as a struggle to travel from point to point. "I don't see what point you're getting at," is his favorite utterance.

If you sat him down and said, "Pearson, I want you to hear something extraordinary," and performed a Beethoven quartet in which you played all four instruments, he would say, "I don't see what point you're getting at."

Pearson cannot comprehend that the best part of life might be located in the spaces between points. The points are what it's all about to him. He becomes unhappy, even short-tempered, if he doesn't see you approaching one. The highest accolade he can bestow is the cry, "Now you're getting to the point!"

It is almost unbearable to be present at an encounter between Kunkel and Pearson. "Let's look at the facts," Kunkel will say, if they meet in a cafeteria. "Coffee is 40 cents cheaper here than it is in a sit-down restaurant, the napkins are paper instead of cloth, and unemployment among black teenagers is running close to 40 per cent."

"I don't see what point you're getting at," Pearson will reply. "Look at the facts!" Kunkel will explain. "The growth rate of gross national product has declined 2 per cent and tension between India and Pakistan is just as high as ever."

Somewhere about here you will be quite willing to swing for stabbing both of them with a fork, but since all the forks in the cafeteria are plastic there is no relief in sight.

Unless Barclay joins the group after having had a few drinks. Barclay sees life as a quest for love. It disturbs him that his fellow creatures are so reluctant to come right out and say, "I love you, Barclay." To force it out of them, he takes just enough alcohol to make him sadly self-pitying, a state in which he feels justified in looking at you and saying, "You hate me, don't you?"

His theory is that, after a good, heart-to-heart exchange of heated talk of the sort that goes on between unhappy lovers in bad movies, you will break down and say, "I love you, Barclay. You know I love you. Everybody loves you." Which will give him the cue to say, "I love you, too."

And so, we are all in the cafeteria line, Kunkel saying, "Let's look at the facts," and Pearson saying, "I don't see what point you're getting at." Up toddles Barclay. "You hate me, don't you?" he says.

"Let's look at the facts," says Kunkel. "Iago said he hated Othello, and hate is a very strong word."

"I don't see what point you're getting at," says Pearson.

Barclay: "The point is, you hate me, don't you?" Pearson: "I wasn't talking to you. I was talking to Kunkel."

Kunkel: "Let's look at the facts. When you said, 'I don't see what point you're getting at,' you were looking at Barclay, not at me."

Barclay (to anybody): "You hate me, don't you?"

Those are the facts. So are the plastic forks. Let's look at them. Let's get at the point. Let's tell Barclay we love him so he'll go away. Better yet, let's not. Let's sneak off and rehearse Beethoven's Ninth on the kazoo.

Before the Judge

A 22-year-old Victoria man was given a six-month jail term Thursday in provincial court for a Feb. 6 break-in at Capital Iron and Metals Ltd., 1900 Store.

Judge William Ostler imposed the sentence on Kenneth Brian McKee, 1147 View, after noting that McKee had an uncontrolled drinking problem and also had a criminal history for related offences.

The break-in occurred shortly before 5 a.m. Feb. 6 and McKee pleaded guilty Feb. 21 when he was remanded until Thursday for a pre-sentence report.

Ostler said the Alouette River unit is the best hope for McKee's rehabilitation and recommended the term be served there. He also placed McKee on a year's probation and ordered him to accept any alcoholic counselling prescribed.

Royal was charged with a breaking and entering Wednesday at the Beaver Home Centre Ltd., 1580 Hillside.

He was remanded until next Thursday for election of his trial method.

Two 19-year-olds who grabbed money from the till of a corner store were remanded until March 28 for a pre-sentence report and sentencing.

Antonio Segui, 493 Constance, and Franciskus Johannes Smit, also known as Frank Smith, who gave addresses of 493 Constance and 2622 Sunderland, pleaded guilty to theft under $200.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said pair entered Gordon Head Store, 4343 Tyndall, at about 6:40 p.m. Feb. 14 while the 13-year-old daughter of the owner was working. Mulligan said Smit went behind the counter to the cash register and grabbed $28. Both men ran out of the store and sped off in a car.

Victoria city police later checked a car in the 700-block Bay matching the description of the vehicle and arrested the men.

Mulligan said the pair told police they were financially desperate at the time.

Leandre Leon Bonneville, 34, elected trial by judge and jury in connection with charges of forcible seizure and rape.

Bonneville was charged in a Sept. 24, 1977, incident in Colwood and Victoria. He is in custody at Wilkinson Road jail awaiting sentencing March 19 on another case.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Patrick David Steele, 47, of 904 Hillside, $500; David Howard Terice, 18, of 7840 Lochside, $500; Heikki Harmala, 50, of 929 Marchant, $400; Ronald Charles Russell, 25, of 964 Grilse, $400; Robert Taylor Blair, 50, of 10187 Resthaven, $400; William Burns, 33, of 7986 Gallbraith, $400; Brenda Alice Daniels, 29, of 210 West Burnside, $200; and Wayne Owen Martin, 17, of 9175 East Saanich, $200.

In addition, Mrs. Daniels was ordered to perform 50 hours of community service work and Martin was ordered to do 75 hours.

$70,000 Study Of Wolves Set

Environment Minister Rafe Mair said Thursday the provincial government will undertake a two-year, $70,000 study on wolves.

Mair said the study will determine the extent of wolf predation on livestock and the effectiveness of predator control programs in problem areas.

He said the study will necessitate the killing of about 50 wolves a year in areas that have experienced heavy predator losses.

However, the wolf pack in one area will remain intact, so officials can compare cattle losses with those areas that are under control.

Mair said $20,000 has been put aside as compensation for ranchers who suffer livestock losses in the study area.

The study will also allow the environment ministry to sort out the confusion surrounding wolf control and give wildlife officials a first-hand look at how serious the problem is, he said. The moratorium on poisoning will stay in effect.

Press Talks Continue

Talks aimed at ending the four-month strike-lockout at Vancouver's two daily newspapers are continuing but the parties involved are not commenting on what progress, if any, is being made.

Labor Minister Allan Williams was quoted Thursday as saying the negotiations, with the help of mediator Peter Dowding, were productive.

However, union spokesman Phil Needham said today the minister did not get any official information from either of the parties or from the mediator.

Needham would neither confirm nor deny Williams' description of the current round of talks which began Feb. 14.

He said the parties did not meet together all this week but spent the time working out cost calculations and exchanging this and other information with the mediator.

The negotiations were adjourned Thursday but Needham, co-chairman of the joint council of unions at Pacific Press Ltd., which produces the morning Province and afternoon Sun, said the parties will likely get together again early next week.

Reno-Style Divorce Feared

VANCOUVER (CP) — The proposed transfer of power over marriage and divorce to provincial from federal authority could create a Reno-type divorce atmosphere in Canada, says a Vancouver lawyer.

Karen Nordlinger says the B.C. branch of the Canadian Bar Association has sent Attorney-General Garde Gardom a resolution opposing the change.

At present, the provincial government's jurisdiction is limited to the solemnization of marriage.

Ms. Nordlinger, chairman of the branch's family law section, said in a news release that the ramifications would be tremendous if there were 10 different divorce laws in Canada.

She said that if a divorce were more easily obtained in one province than another, there would be a travelling population of those seeking divorce.

Tremendous problems already exist in enforcing orders for custody of children, she said, and if there is no federal statute in this area, further jurisdictional battles will result.

Elk River Coal Project Wins Cabinet Approval

VERNON — A cabinet committee has approved in principle the massive Elk River open-pit coal project in southeastern British Columbia.

Expected to cost $500 million, the proposed development would involve a 2,290-acre open-pit mine, and would produce 4 million tonnes of coal a year.

Announcement of the committee's approval was made at a news conference by Jim Hewitt, minister of energy mines and petroleum resources, and Environment Minister Rafe Mair, chairman of the cabinet committee on environment and land use.

Hewitt said the consortium proposing the development for the upper Elk River Valley, 48 kilometres north of Elkford in southeastern B.C., could begin the project by the mid-1980s.

He said the mine would generate about 1,300 direct jobs, and together with support and service jobs would increase the population of the Upper Elk Valley by 4,500 persons.

This probably would require construction of a new town, he added.

Elco Mining Ltd., a consortium that includes seven German steel manufacturers, has completed a series of mine design, environmental and community developmental studies in accordance with provincial guidelines for the coal development.

Hewitt said the committee studied the proposals, received comments from East Kootenay communities, and concluded that the project would bring considerable benefits to B.C. residents provided that commitments were made during its design, development and operation to careful, environmental planning and management.

He said the provincial land-use commission earlier deferred a decision on the proposal for a new community at Forsyth Creek. Further studies and consultation with local communities are planned by the government with a decision expected early this summer.

"I have been advised by the company that it is envisioning a decision to begin detailed engineering for the project in 1980," Hewitt said. "They think they may begin the project by the mid-1980s."

Mill Boss Critical Of Gov't

ENDERBY (CP) — The provincial government is to blame for a shortage of raw material that will force the Morrill and Sturgeon Lumber Co. to shut down in 10 days, general manager Bob Mee said Thursday.

Mee said the mill here will have to lay off its 63 employees and auction off all its equipment.

"The government talks about total utilization of the forest and supporting small businesses, and yet they haven't given us one bit of support," Mee said.

The company uses thin-shelled cedar material that the larger sawmills cannot use and turns it into commercially valuable lumber. Mee claims large quota holders — Crown Zellerbach, Riverside Forest Products Ltd. and Federated Co-Op — leave behind, bury or burn large sections of trees that his company can mill.

However, he said he can't convince the provincial government to institute measures which would assure him of a constant supply of that timber from logged-off areas.

Len Bawtree (SC--Shuswap) said Thursday he has received assurances from the B.C. Forest Service that all the wood in the forests is being used and none is being wasted.

John Wanderer, Enderby district forest ranger, also disagreed with Mee's assessment of the situation, adding that because of the high value of cedar products many quota holders are using material that they are not required to process under the terms of their licence.

Mee said he is willing to pay royalties and transportation charges if the large quota holders will ship in their discarded raw material, but he needs the support of the provincial governmnent if such a plan is implemented.

Morrill and Sturgeon was placed in receivership 11 months ago and Mee was hired to turn the operation around. He said potential purchasers of the company have been frightened away because of the uncertainty of raw material supply.

Strike On At SFU

BURNABY (CP) — The more than 600 members of the Association of University and College Employees have begun a full-scale strike at Simon Fraser University.

The workers voted Thursday to take immediate all-out strike action in response to the university's selective lockouts.

Earlier Thursday, eight workers in the purchasing department were locked out when they attempted to return to work after a rotating strike. About 100 union members promptly walked off the job.

The union has been conducting rotating strikes at the university for several weeks to support contract demands.

Skaha Pollution Down

PENTICTON (CP) — Pollution in Skaha Lake just south of here has been reduced considerably, says a government report.

The Okanagan Basin Implementation Board, a federal-provincial body, said in its annual report that the amount of unwanted phosphorous entering the lake from the city's sewage outlets has been reduced by 80 to 90 per cent.

Phosphorous promotes the growth of algae, which is not conducive to recreational use of a lake. Skaha Lake is a popular summer resort area.

The phosphorous levels now are lower than the target the board set when it began the reduction program in 1974.

The report also said preliminary results of water quality tests show the main part of Okanagan Lake has maintained an excellent quality for recreational purposes, but shoreline areas still have pollution problems.

Phosphorous removal progams also have been introduced at the Okanagan Valley communities of Vernon, Osoyoos, Coldstream and Okanagan Falls but are still needed in all major communities.

Why does a Canadian company have a plant in Turkey? Because it means 1,200 jobs here at home.

Northern Telecom last year signed its third five-year supply contract with the Turkish Post, Telegraph and Telephone Administration. The contract is to export to Turkey an estimated $170 million of Canadian-made telecommunications products and components which will be assembled into switching and other final products by Northern Electric Telekomünikasyon A.S. (NETAS) in Istanbul.

This one contract will, over the five years, support nearly 900 jobs a year in Northern Telecom Canada plants and a further 300 jobs in the plants of our Canadian suppliers.

Exports from Northern Telecom Canada last year totalled more than $100 million – about 11.5 percent of the total sales of our Canadian factories. Exports maintained some 1,600 jobs in our Canadian plants, and at least half as many again in the plants of our suppliers.

Wherever and whenever possible we make foreign sales through the direct export of finished products manufactured in Canada. And we are, in fact, chalking up considerable success with such exports to Asia, the Middle East and Latin America.

However, we know we cannot hope to achieve any significant penetration of the world's two largest telecommunications markets, the United States and Western Europe, through exports alone. To succeed in those markets – as we must – we have turned to other strategies.

We have entered the telecommunications markets of Great Britain, France and Sweden, for example, by licensing local manufacturers to produce and market Canadian-designed products such as our SL*-1 digital business communications system and the world-famous Contempra* telephone.

In Turkey, we have a joint venture with the Turkish government. In the United States and Ireland, where many of the telephone companies to whom we sell depend on government loan assistance to finance equipment purchases, we have satisfied government local content requirements by building and acquiring local plants. In turn, many of these plants are supplied components from our Canadian factories.

Each of these international marketing strategies translates into jobs for Canadians. Jobs manufacturing products for export. Jobs dependent on the research and development funds we generate through foreign sales. And jobs manufacturing components for Northern Telecom plants in Turkey, Europe and the U.S.

today's markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market advanced moderately in active mid-afternoon trading today.

Trading resumed at about 10:30 a.m. in class A and B shares of Home Oil Co. Ltd. after a halt at the opening.

Consumers' Gas Co. said it will make an offer March 16 on Canadian markets for up to 700,000 class A shares of Home Oil at $58½ a share. By 2 p.m., Home Oil A was down ⅛ to $52⅞ and Home Oil B down ⅝ to $49½.

A trading halt continued in shares of St. Fabien Copper Mines Ltd. pending an announcement after the company's annual meeting Friday. The stock last traded at 26 cents.

The Ontario Securities Commission said it issued a cease-trading order in shares of Capital Dynamics Ltd. for failure to make statutory findings. A hearing will be held March 23.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed ahead in active trading, extending its week-long rally after some mid-session hesitation.

The Dow showed a fractional loss at mid-day, encountering some resistance after its recent runup. But as the afternoon passed prices began advancing again.

Analysts have been at something of a loss to spot any concrete developments as "reasons" for this week's rally.

They have noted some apparent hopes that President Carter's Middle East trip will produce a peace agreement between Egypt and Israel.

"...looks alone could sell the RX-7."
AutoWeek (April 1978)

That's quite a statement, isn't it? But then the RX-7 is quite a car. In fact, AutoWeek (April 1978) also said the performance on the RX-7 is in the same league as the costlier 280—Z, and is so quick it makes sports cars like the MGB seem positively arthritic. That goes to show you that RX-7's beauty is more than skin deep.

TV Live from Commons in Victoria Monday

Live coverage of debates of the House of Commons will be available in Victoria and 14 other cities beginning Monday.

The CBC has been granted a temporary network licence to make the debates available through the co-operation of cable systems in the 15 cities.

Already seen in Ottawa and Toronto on a live basis, the service will be extended for a 30-day period to Victoria, Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary, Regina, Winnipeg, Montreal, Quebec, Moncton, Fredericton, Halifax, Charlottetown and St. John's, Nfld.

Cable systems which still have a channel available on the basic dial — those available without use of a converter — can show the debates on such a channel. Or they could use a converter channel.

In Victoria, the live debates will be seen at 11 a.m. on converter Channel G (20).

If stations wish to use their community channels, they may show only question period at the opening hour of a Commons sitting.

There will be only a slight difference in the format of the debates now seen in Ottawa and Toronto.

At the start of the Commons day a CBC staff announcer will tell viewers the business to be debated that day. This now is done through a printed message.

When the Commons breaks for meals at six o'clock Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings, the CBC will repeat the question period. This also will apply for the 1 p.m. break for lunch on Fridays.

Church Burglars Caught in Act

Two youths are in custody following a break-in at Christ Church Cathedral at 912 Vancouver Thursday night.

City police went to the church after a silent alarm was activated at 10:09 p.m.

Officers found a hatch door in a crawl space under the church had been forced open.

The suspects, aged 17 and 19, were discovered hiding inside.

They have been charged with breaking and entering and possession of housebreaking tools.

In a separate, unrelated incident four doctors' offices were entered in a medical centre at 1022 Pandora.

Police said nothing appeared to be taken.

Keep Copy, BCRIC Warns

Applicants for the five free shares in the government-owned B.C. Resources Investment Corp. have been reminded to hang on to their copy of the application form.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Thursday the bearer's copy is the only proof for receiving the shares once they are made available in August.

Applications can be filed as early as March 15.

The applicant's form is one section of a three-part application and must be retained, Wolfe said.

The minister said the application forms are the first line of defence against fraud.

He warned applicants to deal only with reputable financial institutions.

And they will be required to show two of only three acceptable pieces of identification — B.C. Driver's licence, social insurance card or medical card (or for persons over 65 years, a Pharmacare card).

NDP MLA Lifts Her Boycott

NDP Agriculture critic Barbara Wallace said Thursday she will attend the wrap-up meetings in Richmond of the legislature's select standing committee on agriculture.

The MLA had earlier pledged to boycott the rest of the meetings because of the cost overruns of the long-delayed committee's final report.

"The three NDP members of the committee will attend the meeting on the strict understanding that it finally will complete the report on food prices," she said.

Mrs. Wallace had criticized the committee for spending taxpayer's money "while the food prices study meandered all over the province's hotel circuit."

She said the study is now two years old and will cost about $3 million.

Young-Family Mortgages To Remain in Housing Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — After five hours of negotiations with opposition parties, Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet appeared Thursday to have found a way to salvage a controversial plan to provide mortgages for young families.

He said Wednesday that he was willing to drop a graduated mortgage payments plan altogether in order to get National Housing Act amendments passed by the Commons this week.

However, on Thursday, Conservative housing critic Jean Pigott and the New Democratic Party agreed to let Ouellet keep a slightly modified scheme in the bill.

The minister agreed to require higher down payments than he had planned before home buyers could qualify for the mortgages, under which payments would start relatively small and grow each years.

Yvon Pinard, parliamentary secretary to Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen, told the Commons Thursday night all parties agreed tha the bill would be given clause-by-clause study by the Commons as a whole today.

This was a way to speed up passage of the bill, which Pinard hoped would become law today. He said all parties agreed to all amendments that would be made during that study.

The graduated mortgage payment plan is designed to allow young families to buy houses when their income is relatively low and to make higher payments as their income rise.

Conservatives and New Democrats criticized it on grounds it would entice young people into buying homes they could not afford. Mrs. Pigott said the changes Ouellet agreed to put their fears to rest.

Ouellet also has agreed to insert a municipal land bank scheme advocated by the NDP into the bill.

Details of other proposed amendments to the bill remained sketchy Thursday night, but both sides expressed optimism that the bill could be passed today.

A spokesman for Ouellet said the government was under heavy pressure from provinces and municipalities to pass the bill quickly.

The legislation would transfer more housing responsibility to provincial governments and would authorize budget cuts announced as part of the government's spending restraint program last August.

Rehabilitation Failing: Prison Chief

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian prisons do not rehabilitate offenders but they do provide excellent educational opportunities, the chief of the Correctional Service of Canada says.

Chris Yeomans, said federal prisons provide incarceration rather than rehabilitation.

"There is very strong evidence that it (rehabilitation) just isn't a realistic objective, particularly . . . at the penitentiary level of the system because most inmates of penitentiaries are graduates of other elements of the social welfare structure in our country."

There now are 9,300 prisoners in institutions operated by the Correctional Service of Canada. The cost of keeping them in the 53 penitentiaries is $25,000 a year for each prisoner.

Yeomans said prisoners released on parole have a 30 per cent chance of returning to penitentiaries.

PCs Exit; Energy Bill Clears Committee

OTTAWA (CP) — A predominantly-Liberal Commons committee quickly approved government emergency energy supplies legislation early today after Progressive Conservatives walked out, claiming the bill was being rammed through Parliament.

The Conservatives stomped out of a marathon session of the national resources committee after midnight when the Liberal majority repeatedly voted down their efforts to adjourn the meeting.

Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie labelled the bill an urgent government requirement and said he was prepared to answer questions all night if necessary.

The remaining Liberals quickly passed the outstanding clauses, clearing the way for Commons debate on third and final reading of the bill to begin Monday. Prime Minister Trudeau has indicated he wants the legislation passed before calling a general election.

Conservative energy critic Allan Lawrence said his party is not being given enough time to study the legislation, which authorizes mandatory allocation of oil, natural gas and coal supplies in a national energy crisis.

Lawrence indicated the Conservatives would introduce a number of amendments in the Commons to protest against the government action.

The committee has met up to three times a day in the last week to hear industry and government representatives discuss the security of domestic energy supplies.

The bill was introduced last month in response to the growing shortage of world oil supplies resulting from the loss of production in strife-torn Iran.

The situation was heightened for Canada when Exxon Corp., international parent company of Imperial Oil Ltd., diverted shipments of Venezuelan crude destined for import-dependent eastern Canada to markets outside the country.

The government says it needs the bill to meet commitments given to the International Energy Agency to reduce demand on world stocks should the level of production fall seven per cent below the present rate.

Earlier Thursday, Ontario, citing the need to express blunt truths, delivered a stinging criticism of federal energy policy in general in recent years.

Ontario, in a brief to the committee, also ridiculed the bill as setting up a federal dictatorship over energy matters by authorizing powers that went far beyond the needs of any potential energy crunch.

Gillespie acknowledged to the committee that the proposed energy supplies allocation board would hold substantial power in the event of an emergency energy crisis.

The board's powers would override any existing commercial contracts and would authorize the allocation of supplies for domestic use on the basis of all stocks available in Canada.

The board could, for example, order oil to be delivered to any region of the country short of supply, by whatever means possible and from whatever source. Rationing down to the consumer level could also come come into effect.

Lawrence (Northumberland Durham) pressed Gillespie to include in the bill a provision allowing compensation to be paid to companies and individuals ordered to make economic sacrifices.

Lang's Turn To Gloat

OTTAWA (CP) — Transport Minister Otto Lang gloated Thursday when he noted in the Commons that the United States is following a Canadian move to ban certain batteries in radios designed to allow search planes to home on downed aircraft.

The minister called on Conservative John Crosbie to apologize for the things the Newfoundland MP has said during debates on the issue.

Crosbie, of St. John's East, has called the minister a kamikazi minister, among other things, as he demanded that the government force aircraft to use emergency locator transmitters (ELTs) to help search planes.

The government suspended rules ordering the use of ELTs when it was found that lithium batteries used in them could explode in certain circumstances.

Now the American government has banned the use of the batteries.

Dog Pelts Pass Off As Wolf?

NORTH BAY, Ont. (CP) — City police are investigating the possibility that fur from slaughtered dogs may be sold as valuable wolf pelts at the North Bay fur auction.

They are assisting an investigation that began in Vaudreuil, Que., where at least eight dogs were killed at the ends of their owners' leashes and dragged away to be skinned.

Police believe the furs may end up in North Bay to be auctioned off at the Ontario Trappers' Association fur sales.

Alex Shieff, the association's fur sales manager, said a number of dog pelts probably have been ended up in the coyote-timberwolf category.

He said it is impossible to distinguish the offspring of German shepherd-wolf parents from pure wolf fur.

Stop Paying Family Allowance To Rich, Social Council Urges

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government should take "a Robin Hood approach" and combat poverty by redistributing family allowance payments, says the Canadian Council on Social Development.

Program Director Geoff Norquay said Thursday that statistics show there were 4.5 million persons living below the council-defined poverty level and that their standard of living could be improved by taking more money from the rich to give to the poor.

Families who earn more than $22,000-a-year should be paying back all their family allowance payments in income tax and the government should be using that money to take better care of those who need assistance, he said.

"Poverty is one problem you can solve by throwing money at it," he said. "But you've got to throw it in the right direction."

Norquay said a "fact book on poverty," to be published this spring by his non-government organization, shows that the billions of dollars spent on social programs in the last decade have not been particularly successful.

"Perhaps we should be thinking about more precisely targeting social programming expenditures, in particular transfer payments, to the people who need the money most — poor people," he said."

"The vast, vast majority of Canadians do not pay back more than 50-55 per cent (of the payments) in income tax, at the marginal tax rate," Norquay said.

"So what that means is that for those families with incomes in excess of the average (about $22,000) the government does not recapture that much — maybe half of the family allowance payments that it has made."

The council's definition of poor people covers all those families which live on $10,500 a year or less — about half the annual income of an average family of four.

It's statistics, based on data from Statistics Canada, show that the average 1976 income for a male-headed family was $18,273 while that for a female-headed family was $7,502.

New Wage, Price Curbs Not Justified Now: PM

Times News Sources

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday that rising prices will not necessarily mean re-imposition of wage and price controls.

Trudeau told his weekly news conference it will depend on whether wages rise at or above the level of rising prices.

"There is no magic number of 10 or nine or 11 per cent," Trudeau said.

Inflation currently is running at about nine per cent and the government has appealed to workers to restrain wage demands, saying a large part of the rise in prices is the result of the lower value of the dollar.

Trudeau said that when wage and price controls were imposed in the fall of 1975 it was on the basis of evidence that the country was headed into a serious inflationary spiral because of expectation of future inflation.

Prices were rising at more than 10 per cent annually, he said. But wage settlements in the first half of 1975 were above 20 per cent.

Trudeau also said he would seek changes in ths constitution giving the federal government the right to unilaterally impose wage and price controls if it considers inflation is getting out of hand.

The changes, which he would seek in future meetings with provincial premiers, would mean the government wouldn't have to declare that inflation had created an emergency situation as it did in 1975.

He said these changes would be part of a general package giving the federal government more jurisdiction to deal with inflation, unemployment and defence of the dollar.

Trudeau also indicated he was unlikely to delay an election beyond June, saying he would "have to worry about the political consequences" if he resorted to a constitutional technicality to extend his term.

But the PM, in a puckish mood, declined at a news conference to catergorically rule out delaying an election through such a manoeuvre.

Asked about the Liberals' election chances, Trudeau replied: "Well, in my mind it looks as if we might win and we might lose."

A Gallup poll released this week showed the Liberals had gained a razor-thin one point lead over the Tories.

The PM said he still attached high priority to passage of bills giving the government the right to hold constitutional referendums and increased powers to deal with emergency energy shortages.

Pension Rules Change For Business Loans

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government unveiled a loan-insurance program for medium-sized businesses Thursday, saying it will help free billions of dollar in pension funds for more productive investment.

Private pension plans now have assets of more than $30 billion but they are prohibited by law from the riskier investments such as those in small- and medium-sized businesses.

Under the plan, announced in Ottawa and in Halifax by Robert Andras, president of the board of economic development ministers, private insurance companies will be established to insure loans to medium-sized businesses.

Andras was in Halifax to open the first of a string of business information centres across Canada.

Under the new loan plan the federal government will act as reinsurer, a sort of backstop for the private insurers, to help spread the risk and speed implementation of the program.

With the risk removed, pension funds can make loans to the "junior industrials" — companies with assets between $1 billion and $25 billion.

Loans will be up to $5 million with a minimum term of five years.

Officials in the department of industry, trade and commerce say planning for the program started nearly two years ago and has involved consultations with a number of financial institutions.

There are few programs like it anywhere in the world, they say.

An official said it is expected the first loan insurance will be offered within several months, and that a number of financial groups had indicated interest.

He declined to name the companies interested but said the private mortgage insurance companies will consider it an obvious market.

The department estimates there are about 12,000 junior industrial companies in Canada.

Analysis has shown they have great difficulty getting long-term loans.

The loan insurance program should not only make it easier to obtain loans, but the cost of the money should be considerably lower because of the reduced risk, the official said.

Premiums for the loan insurance will be one per cent annually on the outstanding balance of the loan.

Missing T4s Turn Up Under Postal Noses

CALGARY (CP) — The mystery of the missing T4s — which no longer are missing — is deepening.

"It certainly is strange," a Post Office spokesman said Thursday when asked to explain how 1,600 missing T4 slips had suddenly reappeared.

Three hours earlier, a replacement shipment of the income tax slips, destined for 1,600 Calgary postal workers, had arrived from Ottawa.

"We can only assume they were somewhere here (in the main post office) all the time, but exactly where we have no idea," said spokesman Pat Dickson.

Dickson said the forms were found in the letter carriers' depot by customer services personnel.

"The letter carriers' depot had been thoroughly searched prior to our asking Ottawa for replacement," he said.

Jim Hall, president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers Calgary local, said earlier the forms had been lost in the mail, but he said his workers were not to blame.

Product of Three Stars is Rising Up Himself

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Esther Williams, Fernando Lamas and Arlene Dahl, a trio of stars from an older generation, may have produced a star of the future in Lorenzo Lamas.

Lorenzo, 21, is the son of Fernando and Arlene. He has been Esther's stepson since she and Fernando married 19 years ago. All three have contributed to Lorenzo's career which includes five movies in little more than a year.

Lorenzo is a handsome young man, 6-foot-2, athletic and likable. He's also self-effacing, admitting he relies on his family for advice. He resembles his father but not so much that people instantly identify him as Fernando's son.

He got his start in Grease, playing Olivia Newton-John's jock boyfriend who loses out to John Travolta.

Subsequently, Lorenzo won top roles in TILT, Promises In The Dark and the starring role in Take Down.

Next he will star in The All-Americans for producer Martin Jurow.

In all but TILT, in which he costars with Brooke Shield, young Lamas portrays an athlete — which figures. His father was a boxer and member of the Argentine national swimming team.

Lorenzo, moreover, was a college swimmer. He holds a green belt in karate, surfs, skis, rides horses and motorcyles. He learned to swim under Esther's tutelage when he was 3.

"It's no wonder I ended up acting and playing jock roles," Lorenzo said. "I'm really a product of three parents. I think of both Arlene and Esther as 'mother.'

"In the last couple of years my father and I have become good friends — man and man instead of man and kid. I listen to his advice because my career really is in my family's hands. I mean, what do I know?

"I have my own apartment but I spend a lot of time with Dad and Esther. Dad knows the business and Esther knows about how to handle a career. I mow their lawn, empty the dishwasher, clip the hedges once in a while for the education I'm getting."

His original intent was to become a veterinarian. But he was increasingly drawn to show business during the summer months in his father's Beverly Hills mansion where he met scores of talented and famous people.

"I looked around at Dad's house and what was parked in the garage," Lorenzo said, grinning, "and I told myself it wasn't a bad way to make a living."

Archer Strikes

DUDLEY, England (AP) — A man wearning a stocking mask and armed with a crossbow robbed a branch of Barclays Bank of more than £1,200 ($2,640), police said. They said a woman customer pummelled the robber with her handbag, but that he still managed to escape in a car.

Mork & Mindy Tops People's Choice

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Mork and Mindy was the big winner in the People's Choice entertainment awards Thursday, taking four, and double winners included Carol Burnett, Olivia Newton-John and Burt Reynolds.

Reynolds and Miss Burnett were named favorite all-around male and female entertainers in the show, nationally televised by CBS.

Mork and Mindy was picked as the favorite new television comedy program and the favorite over-all new television program, and the stars, Robin Williams and Pam Dawber, won honors as favorite new television performers.

The winners were chosen by a nationwide public opinion poll of several thousand people by National Family Opinion Inc., a consumer market research organization.

Miss Burnett won the all-around female entertainer award for the fifth consecutive year, beating out Mary Tyler Moore and Barbra Streisand this year. She also tied Miss Moore in voting for favorite female television performer, beating Suzanne Somers.

Reynolds downed Bob Hope and Steve Martin for the all-around entertainer award and also beat Richard Dreyfuss and John Travolta for favorite movie actor.

Miss Newton-John was picked favorite movie actress over Sally Field and Jane Fonda and defeated Linda Ronstadt and Donna Sommer for favorite female singer.

Mr. Ed Dies At 33

TAHLEQUAH, Okla. (AP) — Mr. Ed, television's "talking" horse of the 1960s, is dead, his owner said Thursday. Mr. Ed was 33.

Mr. Ed had lived on land owned by Clarence Tharp since his television career ended. His health began failing about a year ago, Tharp said, and he died Feb. 28. Mr. Ed was buried without ceremony in a small plot.

Universal Pictures' Mr. Ed television program, about a horse who could talk — but who could be heard only by his owner — ran for five years. It co-starred Alan Young as the human half of the performing team.

Tharp bought Mr. Ed at the end of his television career and took the horse on tour until about five years ago. Mr. Ed appeared in several Western movies, but never again had a "speaking" role.

"He could do 50 tricks when I bought him and I taught him about 50 more," said Tharp, who has also trained cattle, dogs and buffalo.

"Mr. Ed was always good natured and was one of the smartest horses I ever saw," said Tharp. "You had to watch him or he would steal your tools and hide them."

Alcohol Abuse now Crisis, Says WHO

GENEVA (UPI) — A global increase in alcoholism and a subsequent increase in crime, drunk driving and absenteeism is so serious that urgent measures must be taken, the World Health Organization said today.

"So rapidly have alcoholism and alcohol-related problems increased that they now rank among the world's major health concerns, threatening to slow down economic development in the Third World and overburden the health services of most countries," a WHO report said.

It said the annual per capita consumption of alcohol increased in a representative 25-country sample by between 30 and 500 percent between 1950 and 1976.

Portugal, with an increase of 30 percent in alcoholic consumption, had the lowest rate of increase. West Germany's 500 percent increase was the highest.

In the United States, consumption increased by 52 per cent over the 26-year period.

Calm Returns After Rioting In French City

DENAIN, France (Reuter) — Calm returned to this northern French steel town today but debris-strewn streets testified to the violence of two days of rioting.

Seven policemen were wounded by rifle fire during this latest bitter protest against government plans to streamline the steel industry and slash 21,000 jobs by the end of the year.

Triola 'Misfit' Says Marvin

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lee Marvin, referring to his former lover as "the plaintiff," testified that Michelle Triola Marvin was a misfit in the movie world and "a detriment to my performance."

"I had discovered she didn't fit into that lifestyle and I couldn't see how she could be of aid to me," Marvin said.

The tough-guy actor, taking the witness stand in his own defence, said Thursday he banished Miss Marvin from his out-of-town movie locations because she did not get along with the cast and crew.

However, the actor also said he urged her to join him during the London filming of The Dirty Dozen.

Marvin, seeking to defeat Miss Marvin's suit for half of his $3.6-million assets accumulated during their six-year love affair, sought to prove the former showgirl was no help in his career or personal life.

He told of their first clash on a movie set in Las Vegas during filming of The Professionals in 1965. Miss Marvin, he said, had arrived uninvited, and he wanted her togo back to their Malibu home.

"I would just say, 'I don't think you're being of help with the flick so why don't you shoot on back to the beach,' " Marvin said.

She eventually left, he said.

Marvin said he left to film The Dirty Dozen in 1966, and refused his girl-friend's plea that she come along.

"I said 'No, never again,' " he said. "The experience with The Professionals was it and I could not tolerate that again. She said she would behave herself, but I said no."

But moments later Marvin's lawyer, David Kagon, asked whether Miss Marvin eventually came to The Dirty Dozen set.

"Yes," Marvin said. "She arrived in mid-July 1966."

"Had you asked her to join you?" Kagon asked.

"Yes, I had," Marvin replied.

Evidence in the trial includes several love letters from Marvin counting the days until Miss Marvin was to join him in London.

Near the end of his case, Kagon aimed at countering Miss Marvin's claim that she is entitled to the award because she was Marvin's companion, helpmate and housekeeper for six years.

Marvin, 55, had testified earlier as a hostile witness during presentation of Miss Martin's case several weeks ago.

Observers Dispute Amin Victory Claim

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Uganda's President Idi Amin said today his army had smashed a Tanzanian-led invasion but diplomatic sources disputed the claim and said Tanzanian gunners were pounding the key "gateway" town of Mpigi with around-the-clock bombardment.

"Despite Amin's claims, the Tanzanians have still not met any meaningful resistance and at this moment it looks as if they could just walk into Kampala," a highly placed diplomatic source said.

In a special Radio Uganda broadcast today, Amin said, "The enemy is retreating and the armed forces have captured intact long-range artillery and other military hardware from the retreating enemy."

But the diplomatic source said Mpigi, less than 30 miles from Kampala and the key to Amin's defence of his capital, had been under heavy bombardment for at least 24 hours.

The latest reports said some Tanzanian troops may already have entered the town.

The loss of Mpigi would be a catastrophic defeat for Amin because it would bring the Tanzanians within artillery range of the capital and Entebbe Airport, Uganda's last lifeline to the outside world.

The Ugandan army had reportedly built major fortifications just south of Mpigi, deploying tanks, artillery and several thousand troops in what one diplomat called an "iron wall" designed to defend the capital.

According to analysts in Nairobi, the Tanzanians appear to have decided to speed up their advance in order to take advantage of the apparent lack of readiness of Amin's forces.

But diplomatic sources said today visitors to Amin's so-called "Mpigi line" reported that "there were no Ugandan troops to be seen."

South African White Miners Staying Out

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — White miners fighting a government move to let blacks take some of the skilled jobs now reserved for whites in South Africa pushed their wildcat strike into a third day today.

A spokesman for the Chamber of Mines, the association of mine owners, said gold mines were hardest hit by the strike by an estimated 6,000 of the 10,000 members of the white Mine Worker's Union.

The strikers stayed out after the Chamber of Mines announced they would lose accrued pension, sick leave, bonuses and vacation time.

Protests Rankle China

By JAY MATHEWS

HONG KONG (WP) — Chinese citizens protesting bad jobs and official discrimination have disrupted government offices in several parts of the country, prompting warnings from Peking that democracy can go too far.

In what appears to be a signal of highest-level concern, the official People's Daily recently said, "a few people incited the masses to cause disturbances, storm government organs, block traffic, surround and attack officials, occupy officials' offices by force and assault and beset people."

Official radio broadcasts monitored here have reported such disturbances in Peking, Shanghai, Wuhan, Chongqing (Chungking) and Yunnan provices. The protesters appear to be people who received hard-labor assignments or other forms of political dicrimination during the political turmoil of the Mao Tse-tung era and now hope the new government in Peking will review their cases.

Open criticism of the current government began last November with appearance of wallposters even criticizing Mao.

When the war with Vietnam broke out Feb. 17, Chinese authorities apparently issued instructions discouraging any public debate or criticism of the war. Foreign observers wondered if free expression on other topics might also be curtailed.

A People's Daily commentary four days later defended free expression vigorously, however, and there appears to have been no significant letup in wallposter activity in Peking.

"Some people's opinions are going to be wrong," the commentary said. "But the method of suppressing criticism is a foolish one, used by those who lack confidence in the truth. Such is the foolish tendency of some comrades who want to call in the public security department whenever someone puts up a wallposter criticizing leading comrades."

An analyst here, referring to the current disruption, called it "a crisis of rising expectations." The new government, led by veteran cadres who themselves recovered from political purges, has promised quick action in reviewing cases of people falsely accused and discriminated against, but the volume of cases and the vehemence of the aggrieved apparently has been too much.

The government appears concerned that the caseloads and the disruptions may hinder the economic progress that is needed.

West 'Deceit' Annoys Botha

CAPE TOWN (Reuter) — South African Premier Pieter Botha on Thursday accused Canada and other western countries of deceit and said no troop withdrawal from Namibia (South West Africa) will take place until certain conditions are met.

Botha told Parliament that before South Africa can comply with UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim's proposals for an independence settlement, guerrillas of the South West Africa Peoples Organization (SWAPO) must stop launching raids and laying mines.

He said South Africa already has come to an agreement with the five Western Security Council powers after two years of sensitive negotiations aimed at finding an internationally acceptable solution for South African-ruled Namibia.

"I accuse the West of no longer standing by that agreement," he told parliament.

Botha's attack followed Waldheim's proposals for the implementation elections in Namibia.

South Africa interprets the proposals as meaning that its own troops will be confined to designated bases, while there will be no monitoring of SWAPO bases in neighboring states.

Shell Averts Strike - Chevron Teeters

Shell Canada Ltd. has reached a tentative agreement with employees at the Shellburn refinery in Burnaby but workers at Chevron Canada's refinery are threatening to walk off the job today.

Shell spokesman John McClurg said today the tentative, two-year agreement calls for an 8½-per-cent wage increase in the first year and 7½ per cent in the second. The contract is retroactive to Feb. 1.

About 126 Shell employees are involved. They are members of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers and had served 72-hour strike notice Feb. 28.

About 104 employees at Chevron's Burnaby refinery, members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, told the company two days ago they would strike today at 6 p.m. if there is no settlement.

A meeting was scheduled for this afternoon and company spokesman Roy Jolly said he is hopeful a settlement can be reached.

He said the only remaining issue centres around agreement on the rate of pay for two new classifications.

Jolly said even if the refinery is struck, the company's customers on Vancouver Island will be serviced.

He said the company has taken all the necessary measures to see to it that there is enough of a supply to last for a considerable time in the event of a strike.

Negotiations are also continuing between Imperial Oil Ltd. and about 150 employees at the company's Ioco refinery near Vancouver. The employees' contract expired Jan. 31.

50 Testify At Disco Probe

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 50 witnesses testified Thursday at a British Columbia Human Rights Commission into allegations of racial discrimination at several downtown discotheques.

Several witnesses told the three-man hearing they were denied admission to some of the clubs because they are black.

Several white women testified that they were escorted to certain clubs by blacks, and while they were allowed in, their escorts were denied entry.

Dermott Owen-Flood, chairman of the hearing, said much of the evidence heard Thursday would not be included in official records because it was based on hearsay.

Right-to-Work Plans Denied

he was once an associate deputy minister of labor and knows the research branch and ministry officials are constantly watching what is taking place in other jurisdictions.

The minister said his letter to Missouri is no exception.

"We like to know what is going on."

Other jurisdictions watch B.C.; it is a normal process in the industry, Williams said.

The resounding defeat of the right to work referendum in Missouri was strange because of the largely rural nature of the state.

Right to work legislation exists mostly in states with an agrarian base.

"I wanted to know what the demographics were because of this strange result," Williams said.

Meanwhile Williams has appointed a special four man committee to investigate multi-employer bargaining accreditations and the applicable legislative provisions.

The committee is to be headed by Judge D.E. McTaggart. It will review the developments in multi-employer bargaining that have already been established in B.C.

TOWN TALK

Pardon us today as we celebrity-starved wretches indulge in some blatant society name-dropping, even if the Hungarian (via Palm Springs, Calif.) Connection is rather remote.

After all, it's not every day we can trot out three honest-to-goodness princes and a count. Not to mention, daarleengs, the mother and sister of ze delightfully zany Zsa Zsa Gabor.

Anyway, this is our story and we're sticking to it:

Victoria resident David Michael has a nephew of the same name who's a well-known sculptor in stone and is now displaying his works at a gallery in Palm Springs.

And among the guests at a recent showing were . . . wait for it . . . "Magda Gabor accompanied by The Prince Bourbon of Spain, Jolie Gabor and her husband The Count de Zigethy, The Prince Andrej of Yugoslavia, The Prince Holenlohe, Charles Le Maire, renowned designer and artist, and host Prince Umberto de Poliolo."

Now who says Town Talk is a parochial dollop of chit-chat full of dreary, commonplace names?

Maybe it's a sign of paranoia fed by infectious rumors of an impending provincial election, but there's a certain town burgher who barely escaped with his ears intact from the downtown Socred headquarters Thursday.

Seems this chap wanted to find out where to apply for his free shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp., and assumed the people at Socred headquarters would know all about it.

The lady who came to his aid didn't know much about the shares, except how wonderful the government is for giving people a bit of the action. But there was little she didn't know about what a drubbing the Socreds were going to give the NDP next time around the polls, or what a dreadful man Dave Barrett is.

"Boy, she really took off.

"It took me half an hour to get out of there," the citizen complained.

By election time — probably a year from now — she'll be all burned out.

Two of Greater Victoria's best-known narcotics officers, referred to by one and all on the street scene as Starsky and Hutch, are up to their old hardnose tricks again.

The pair, never noted for delicacy, stopped a 19-year-old on Yates Thursday afternoon, frisked him and then pushed him into their car.

As they drove off one of the officers let the youth have it with a backhand to the face followed by an assortment of punches. After driving a few blocks they pulled into an alley and told the youth to get out.

Now, by and large, citizens involved in dope deals are not Grade-A people.

But surely there must be another way to handle them and the job, difficult as it might be . . .

Those big, black limousines are getting to be quite a common sight along the Metchosin-William Head road, as visiting royalty and other assorted dignitaries and VIPs are driven out to Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific.

It's natural and understandable, of course, that there should be such interest in the multi-national college and its fine setting overlooking Pedder Bay.

But isn't the whole thing getting just a little one-sided, to the point where it has a faint tinge of educational elitism?

How about breaking with routine and taking the next VIP who hits town to Mount Doug or Vic High?

The Empress has just finished renovating 160 rooms and hotel manager Ted Balderson says there's more upgrading in the works.

Balderson says about $1 million will be spent this year in continuation of the project that's giving new lustre to Victoria's grande dame. The dining room and public areas are slated for work this fall.

He said, however, that contrary to some rumors that have been circulating recently, there are no major expansion plans in the works.

Scholarships are nice but the only fitting tribute to the late premier W.A.C. Bennett would be to erect a life-sized statue of him on the legislature lawn, according to realtor Eric Charman.

"Let's get started on this right away, while everyone remembers the contribution he made to our province," Charman says.

He feels that thousands of people would put up $5 each or more to finance the project.

"And the money should be collected by the Bank of B.C. That's the bank he fought for to end Eastern Canada's monopoly on the banking system."

We've heard of temporary insurance before, but maybe you can take a good thing too far.

One Victoria resident called to say that his recent receipt from the Insurance Corporation of B.C. is stamped with an effective date of March 1, 1979, and an expiry date of Feb. 28, 1979.

You'd have to be driving awfully fast to take advantage of that coverage.

Lifestyle Change Skyrockets Price Of Indian Baskets

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Twenty years ago an Indian basket could be purchased in Victoria for a few dollars.

Today, the same basket — about six inches in diameter and four inches deep — may cost $150.

Larger and older ones sell for $500 or more, depending on the design and quality.

The rising prices reflect the changing lifestyles of Indian women, along with the general decline of an ancient craft which has never ceased to awe people, says Dr. Andrea Laforet of the Provincial Museum, an authority on Indian basketry.

"Fewer people are making baskets today," she said. "And the demand for baskets is increasing."

The combination is bound to force up prices.

She said 50 years ago native craftswomen made baskets for their own use and to sell. Now basket-making for domestic use is rare. On some reserves the craft is no longer practised.

"These work baskets today are much sought after by collectors," she said. "Some of the designs on them are superb."

Laforet is extension curator of the ethnology division of the museum. She is also responsible for the care and upkeep of more than 500 baskets, considered one of the finest collections in North America.

Several factors contributed to the decline of the craft, she said.

One was sending children to residential schools. They were away from their parents and could not be taught the skills.

A child usually started to learn basketry at ages six to eight. It might have taken several years before she could produce quality goods.

"Today many kids just haven't the opportunity to learn the craft. Then again the lifestyles of women have changed."

Laforet said baskets are made mainly from roots, bark and some sedges. Prior to contact with Europeans, Indians made all sorts of utensils for domestic use.

Some museum items, including waterproof hats, dated back to the 1880s.

Victorians will only have one opportunity to hear Laforet reveal some of the mysteries involved in basket-making because she is leaving soon to take up a position in the National Museum in Ottawa.

She will speak on the subject at the Newcombe auditorium on Tuesday, March 13, at 2 p.m.

"In Ottawa, I will still maintain contact with British Columbia," she said. "I will be responsible for material dealing with the culture of the Pacific West Coast Indians."

Street Singers Get Nod

They'll be singing in the streets this summer.

Victoria city council ruled Thursday night a proposal to restrict street musicians to groups of no more than two was decidedly off key.

The proposal, sparked by a complaint from a downtown businesswoman who said she could barely hear herself think because of sidewalk sonatas, was flatly rejected by council.

On another issue, council also voted down a law that would have seen hawkers banned from the Government Street Causeway.

Ald. Bill Tindall wanted to see the street vendors, who sell everything from hot sausages to ice cream, restricted to the old Ocean Cement site on the Inner Harbor.

But the majority of council agreed with Ald. Robin Blencoe and Ald. John Hayes who argued that the hawkers add a lot of life.

HOTELMAN ASKS FREE PRICING

'Prices Don't Stop Drinkers'

B.C.'s high liquor prices have done little if anything to moderate drinking patterns, the president of the B.C. Hotels Association said Thursday.

Ken Noble said in an interview from Kelowna that consumption is as high as it has ever been despite the fact B.C.'s prices are on average higher than Alberta and Ontario.

Noble's comment came after Liquor Distribution Branch general manager R.A. Wallace said in a Times story that B.C.'s liquor prices are designed to encourage moderation in the consumption of alcohol.

"I don't think price, at the liquor store level at least, has stopped anyone from drinking," Noble said.

Noble said if the government is really serious about trying to cut drinking it will allow a free pricing system similar to one in Alberta.

Under such a system hotel operators and restaurateurs can charge whatever the traffic will bear. In B.C. the prices on wines and beer are fixed.

Noble also feels there are too many licences.

He said the rising price of wine has had little effect. The only problem is operators are continuously forced to revise their prices which involves printing new lists, an extra cost.

He said the association has been meeting the government periodically to bring about changes.

"We've had assurances from the new minister (Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Jim Neilsen) he will look at these things. He gave us a positive approach.

"But," Noble added, "we aren't expecting any instant decisions."

The following table compares the price of 14 standard products in B.C., Alberta and Ontario. The prices were those in effect on Feb. 15 in each province.

The beer price includes, in each instance, a 60-cent returnable deposit on the bottles.

B.C. liquor prices include a seven per cent provincial sales tax (although the general sales tax is only five per cent) while the Ontario prices include a 10 per cent provincial sales tax. Alberta has no provincial sales tax.

Alberta prices for wine and spirits are five cents higher than shown because there is a five-cent deposit system. Because the nickel is refundable, the price has been reduced five cents to make a fair comparison with the other provinces

Fisher to Seek NDP Nomination

Greater Victoria school trustee Dr. Mark Fisher said today he will seek the NDP nomination for one of the two Victoria seats in the next provincial election.

The announcement comes four days after John Shields, president of the Victoria Labor Council, declared his intention of running for the NDP nomination.

Fisher said his main motive in running is a desire to "develop some insight and proper planning with respect to the provision of health care in the Victoria area."

A family physician here for 11 years, Fisher is now serving his third consecutive term on the Greater Victoria school board. He has also been on the Camosun College Council for four years.

Woman Dies In Fire

Seventy-six-year-old Gertrude Edith Paulson died Thursday night when fire broke out in a second floor apartment at April Manor, 2530 Wark.

The woman was pronounced dead on arrival at Victoria General Hospital at about 7:30 p.m., an hour after the fire was reported by other tenants in the building.

Deputy fire chief Mike Heppell said there are indications the fire, confined to suite 208, may have been caused by careless smoking.

Meanwhile, police have released the name of a 43-year-old man found dead in an overflowing bathtub at the City Centre Motel, 855 Douglas Wednesday morning.

He was Alexander Joseph MacDonald of Rexdale, Ont.

$7.6 Million Grant For Camosun Work

The provincial government Thursday added $7,650,000 to $600,000 previously granted to Camosun College for a 100,000-square feet expansion on its Lansdowne campus.

But the college board is concerned that the entire undertaking may be threatened because of Greater Victoria school board's reluctance to accept a government offer for its adjoining property.

The college board decided at a meeting Thursday to encourage a three-party effort to resolve that problem, with the two boards and ministry of education getting together.

The ministry has said it will support the transfer of the school board's Paul Building to Camosun, but it is offering about $200,000 less than the $1.1 million the school board claims as the cost of moving.

Camosun trustees have no qualms with the school board's concern about what it deems proper compensation, especially as member Mark Fisher noted, the government has already paid the University of Victoria $4.5 million for its share of Lansdowne campus.

Camosun board also gave approval in principle to plans for a multi-purpose building by architect Terrence Williams, although full agreement on the property matter will have to be reached before construction starts.

$$ Bonus Backed

Ed Higgin, new president of the Victoria Information Centre, said Thursday he is surprised at the results of a survey done by a local radio station which showed that 19 of 20 downtown businesses disapprove of the exchange proposal.

New List for Police Board

Saanich council has submitted to Attorney-General Garde Gardom another list of possible appointees to fill one vacancy on the Saanich police board.

The move comes two months after a previous government appointee to the board, lawyer Robert Hutchison, resigned his position amid controversy and a threatened court action by the Saanich Police Association.

The five names forwarded by Saanich this week include two persons who were on an earlier list of Saanich recommendations which Gardom had ignored in favor of Hutchison: lawyer Alan J. Peterson and Pat Carfra, the wife of a lawyer.

The other three are Bill Neilson, a law professor at the University of Victoria, law student Don Johannessen and accountant Fred Worthington.

The municipality's submission makes it clear that Peterson and Carfra are the first and second preferences.

Saanich council and the police union had objected to the selection of Hutchison, who was appointed by the provincial cabinet Dec. 20.

The union launched B.C. Supreme Court action to have the appointment quashed, claiming that as Hutchison had acted against the union in wage negotiations and arbitration proceedings he could not be seen as objective.

Hutchison resigned because he said he didn't want to waste taxpayers' money in senseless litigation.

Another Song About Parris As Vikings Gain Semi-Finals

CALGARY — At five feet, eight inches, Robbie Parris is not exactly a giant among basketball players.

But Parris, a guard with a penchance for making things happen, was the big man on the court Wednesday night — producing 19 points in Victoria Vikings' 74-70 decision over Winnipeg Wesmen in opening-round action at the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union men's basketball championship.

Victoria, down 39-34 at the half, got the spark it needed from Parris, who ignited a Viking comeback with several spectacular drives to the basket in the opening minutes of the second half.

Parris, voted a second-team all-Canadian on the eve of the eight-team tournament, outshone Winnipeg's Ken Opalka, a six-foot, four-inch forward who made the first team.

Opalka, who averaged 20.7 points a game during the season, sank just six of 24 shots from the field and finished with 14 points. Don Kinaschuk was the Wesmen's top scorer with 18 points.

Ian Hyde-Lay, Parris' back-court partner, scored 15 points while Reni Dolcetti added 12. But a key to Victoria's success was Dolcetti. A league all-star, he hauled in 13 rebounds, the majority in the second-half, and helped shut down Opalka's scoring threats.

In other first-round games, York Yeomen turned aside the stubborn McGill Redmen 93-78, the defending champion St. Marys Huskies rolled past Windsor Lancers 110-95 and St. Francis Xavier X-Men downed Calgary Dinosaurs 100-74.

The Yeomen, up 46-32 at halftime, struggled against McGill until David Coulthard, voted Canada's outstanding university player, sank three consecutive baskets late in the second half. York got 23 points from Bo Pelech and 18 from Ed Siebert. Greg Fasulo had 28 for the Redmen.

Mickey Fox scored 22 of his 37 points in the second half to lead St. Marys to victory over Windsor, who stayed within two points through the first half. All-Canadian Wayne Allison had 30 points for the Lancers.

Varouj Gurunlian and Greg Winston combined for 47 points for St. Francis, which led 52-36 at the half. Pat Lee had 20 for Calgary.

St. Marys plays York and St. Francis tangles with Victoria in semi-final games today. Tuesday's losers dropped to consolation play.

Tonight's Victoria-St. Francis game will be broadcast on radio CJVI, starting at 6 p.m.

And Over In Killarney High Praise for Kelsey

Oak Bay and Mt. Douglas Ramblers moved into the final round, Cowichan did not but the advance of teams during Thursday's action in the British Columbia high school girls' basketball championships had to share the limelight with some individual brilliance.

The individual was Cheryl Kelsey, a five-foot-nine guard who fired a whopping total of 70 points in two games to lead Killarney of Vancouver into the championship round, an eight-team, single knockout affair.

The original 16-team field was cut in half as Salmon Arm, Centennial Centaurs New Westminster Hyacks, South Delta and Penticton also reached the final level.

Oak Bay suffered a 77-46 loss to New Westminster after topping Terrace 54-30 but qualified with a 2-1, won-lost record as the second team in the "C" division. Mt. Doug, one of four teams to win all three games in the preliminary round-robin, beat Penticton 56-39.

Cowichan beat Prince George 48-36 but was eliminated after suffering two losses earlier.

There were several individual standouts, but none could match the performances by Kelsey. She scored 22 points in a 50-28 victory over Duchess Park of Prince George, then pumped in a record 48 as Killarney beat South Delta 63-50. That boosted her three-game total in this year's tournament to 100.

But basketball talent runs in the Kelsey family.

Father Ian, as it happens, coaches Killarney.

One brother, Howard, was the most valuable player in the 1975 B.C. boys' tournament while playing for Point Grey. Another brother, Doug, also was a standout for the Greyhounds.

Action resumed this morning at Mt. Douglas but moves to the University of Victoria's McKinnon Gym for championship semi-finals at 7:30 and 9 tonight.

The championship finale will be played Saturday evening, starting at 9.

Nova Scotia, Ontario Win

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Teams from Nova Scotia and Ontario were winners Thursday at the Canadian senior men's basketball championship here.

Nova Scotia defeated Newfoundland 87-70 and Ontario beat Manitoba 93-82.

The Nova Scotia team's record is 1-1, the same as Newfoundland and Ontario. Manitoba is 0-1 and British Columbia won its only game, on Wednesday.

Weather Blamed, Politics Obvious

WHISTLER, B.C. (CP) — Cancellation of a World Cup downhill ski race touched off a chain reaction of accusations Thursday, but in the end almost everyone remembered to blame the weather.

The race, to have been run today, was cancelled after a four-man jury decided safety barriers were inadequate to protect skiers on a course that had turned to ice from mush.

That decision, made after a course inspection, several stormy meetings and a vote by top skiers not to take a practice run, drew the loudest protests from Canadian skiers.

They weren't the only ones with a gripe, however, during a day of arguments, lobbying, charges and counter-charges that showed international skiing to be just as much politics as sport.

The Canadians charged the Swiss with vetoing the race — the 10th and final downhill of the season — to protect their skiers' World Cup standings.

Chief of race Hugh McLennan said the course was as safe as it's ever been, adding that race organizers could have made even more improvements if given an extra day. The jury argued that there wasn't enough time and that the proper safety netting was by then impossible to get.

Finally, everyone blamed the weather.

After three days of heavy rain and avalanches left the race in doubt Wednesday because the course was too soft, freezing temperatures overnight produced exactly the opposite problem — the course was too hard and fast.

The 3,185-metre Whistler downhill, which drops 895 metres from start to finish, is one of the toughest in the world, and neither jury nor skiers wanted a repeat of the fall last weekend at Lake Placid, N.Y., that seriously injured Italian skier Leonardo David.

The jury found several trouble spots and said race organizers only had bales of hay and the wrong kind of fencing to protect them.

"There were nets but they weren't strong enough," said Serge Lang, who founded the World Cup circuit.

Race chairman Peter Andrews said a Federation Internationale du Ski (FIS) delegate okayed the course Saturday, but the rain that followed melted about 1.5 metres of snow, exposing rocks, stumps and ravines that had to be covered.

Andrews said about $200,000 had been spent on the race with about $15,000 to $20,000 spent on protection.

Ritchie felt, however, that the jury had not given the race organizers time to try to make the necessary adjustments.

"They imposed additional requirements on the race committee just before the training run was to start," he said. "I think it's an unfair demand that they want it done immediately.

"We've waited two days in Europe and we've changed areas. We even skied on four inches of muck at Schladming."

He said the Swiss — whose coach was one of three jury members to vote against the race — had a vested interest in cancellation because it ensured the downhill championship for Peter Mueller and third place for Tony Buergler.

Austrian Ulrich Spiess and Canadians Ken Read, Steve Podborski and Dave Murray were the only four to vote in favor of taking a practice run when the top-seeded 15 skiers held a poll Thursday morning. The vote had no official status, but most observers felt it influenced the jury.

Mueller, who now wins the downhill title with 109 points and a 20-point lead over Peter Wirnsberger of Austria, voted against taking the first of three training runs necessary before a race can be held.

"It's too dangerous," he said. "It's very fast and has no nets on the side."

Debbie Works For Team Spot

The opportunity arises Saturday.

The pretty and petite brunette, one of Canada's outstanding middle-distance runners, will be the hometown hope when a select field of 10 races at Beacon Hill Park for berths on the Canadian cross-country team.

Six women, nine men and six junior men will make up the squad that will represent Canada in the world championships in Limerick, Ireland, March 25. The juniors were selected during the national championships last November but both men's and women's teams will be decided Saturday.

The men's team will be selected from a race in Bowling Green, Ky.

In addition to Scott, others scheduled to participate in the Beacon Hill Park run are Silvia Ruegger of Oshawa, Chris Lavallee of Sudbury, Magda Kubasiewicz of Ottawa, Shauna Miller of Edmonton, Cathy D'Arcy and Dianne Cameron of Calgary, Lynn Kanuka of Saskatoon, Brigit Otto and Maureen Crowley of Vancouver.

The 5,000-metre race will start at 2 p.m. and will be run over a course set out in Beacon Hill Park. The start and finish lines along Dallas Road, in front of Lookout Hill.

It will be the "main event" but a series of other events, starting at 1 p.m. and concluding at 3:15, have been included in the "Afternoon of Cross-Country Racing" sponsored by the University of Victoria Middle Distance Training Group.

Devlin's Dealing A Favor for Fry

OTTAWA (CP) — Alberta's Paul Devlin did a favor for Barry Fry and his Manitoba rink Thursday night.

Rick Folk will be looking for the same treatment this afternoon in the 11th round of the Canadian men's curling championship.

Devlin skipped his Edmonton team to a 10-7 decision over Folk's Saskatoon foursome in the 10th round and dropped Saskatchewan into second with a 7-2, won-lost record.

Fry and his Winnipeg teammates, appreciating Devlin's performance, scored two on the 10th end when the Manitoba skip made a last-rock takeout and stayed to beat Nova Scotia's Alan Darragh 5-3 to move into sole possession of first place at 7-1.

That set the stage for the 11th round with Manitoba meeting Alberta, while Saskatchewan had a bye.

"We probably took a few more chances," said Devlin, who raised his record to 5-4. "We just haven't been very sharp. I think we played well against Quebec (Devlin won that match 8-3 Wednesday) and against Saskatchewan but we just haven't been sharp.

"We've been doing little things wrong. Maybe because it's the first Brier, I don't know."

Alberta didn't give Folk much of a chance in the evening draw, scoring three on the first end, then stealing three on the fourth and one on the fifth for a 8-2 margin. Folk, who was heavy with a number of draws, staged a brief rally with three on the sixth but he conceded on the ninth with Devlin set to draw into an open house for a possible three.

In other 10th-round games, Prince Edward Island's Wayne Matheson of Charlottetown beat New Brunswick's Richard Belyea of Saint John 8-3, Glen Pierce, skip of the British Columbia rink from Vancouver, downed Newfoundland's Jeff Thomas 8-5 and Northern Ontario's Larry Pineau edged Quebec's Jim Ursel of Montreal 6-5 when the Thunder Bay skip drew into an open house for three with his last rock on the 10th.

Northern Ontario and P.E.I. remained in contention with 6-3 records.

Verbal Shots Only the Start

Larry Gordon, general manager of Edmonton Oilers of the World Hockey Association, reacted to the National League's negative expansion vote like a gunslinger at the OK Corral.

He emptied both six-shooters Thursday.

"If the NHL thought they were in a war with the WHA before, they were dead wrong. That was just a minor skirmish.

"Watch the bullets start flying now. It's an all-out battle from now on."

Gordon had trouble hiding his disappointment at the 12-to-5 vote against bringing four WHA teams — Edmonton, New England, Quebec and Winnipeg — into the NHL for the 1979-80 season.

Gordon added that the Oilers will be in a war again for draft-age juniors from free agents from the NHL, good talent from Europe and "maybe an underage junior."

Stossel, Grexton Lead Tenpinners

Charlotte Stossel staged a strong finish and Brian Grexton got away to a sizzling start as both captured tenpin honors during the 20th week of competition in the 16th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Charlotte topped the women's division with a 188-147-262 — 597 series in the Friday Niters League while Brian set the pace in the men's section honors with a 255-222-201 — 678 series in the Wednesday Men's Commercial League.

Both winning efforts were rolled at Mayfair Lanes.

Breakers Lend a Hand In Draw with Bruins

Victoria Cougars, it may turn out, may appreciate Thursday's "half-loaf" offering by Seattle Breakers.

The Breakers, bouncing back on third-period goals by Len Dies and George Walter, salvaged a 2-2 tie with New Westminster Bruins Thursday and the splitting of points could have a bearing on the second-place finish in the Western Hockey League's Western Division.

It kept the Cougars four points ahead of the Bruins and each team has eight games remaining, including two against each other. Victoria plays the Bruins in Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum on Sunday and teams complete their season's rivalry in Memorial Arena on March 17.

Cougars play their next game Saturday, at Memorial Arena, against first-place Portland.

In Thursday's only other action, the Pat Ginnell-coached Lethbridge Broncos bolstered their hopes of finishing first in the Central Division by tripping Medicine Hat Tigers 6-2. The win moved Lethbridge to within three points of Billings Bighorns but the Broncos have two games in hand.

Point Away

Victoria Athletics are only one point away from advancing into the South Island Big Six Hockey League final against Esquimalt Maple Leafs.

The fourth game of the semi-final will be played Wednesday at Juan de Fuca.

Wildlife Branch Funding A Recognizeable Problem

(Second of Two Parts)

Environment Minister Rafe Mair appears to have one basic problem to solve either before or after he achieves his intention of giving the Fish and Wildlife Branch a higher profile.

Prior to our discussion, this writer learned from a reliable source that the provincial government treasury board has cut "flexible money" from most regional budgets in the branch to below what it was last year.

The branch was short of money in the last fiscal year and these cuts — which don't even take inflation into account — won't help at a time increased funding is necessary.

It's necessary for several reasons.

We lack basic inventory data on our fish and wildlife resources for meaningful input into multiple-use management decisions. And, let's face it, gathering this material throughout the rugged geographical conditions of British Columbia is expensive.

The Forest Service, by contrast, is decades ahead in inventory work.

Another factor to take into consideration is our gradual move over the next few years into second-growth forest management. Again, fish and wildlife data is lacking under these conditions.

During the course of our discussion, Mair came up with an idea on how more funding could be provided.

"I get the sense that a lot of fishermen, hunters, outdoorsmen and so on whouldn't mind paying a little money for the use of the outdoors if these funds were designated and didn't go into consolidated general revenue and not easily traced."

"I've asked my staff to look into that as a possibility," he explained.

Fundwise, Mair stated:

"I don't think there's any question that we can't upgrade our approach to the outdoors."

Whether this increased money will come from a conservation trust fund (presumably established through some sort of licencing system), through diversion of lottery funds or by taking more out of general revenue remains to be seen.

"They have to be forthcoming," said Mair, "It's false economy not to do it."

Before asking for more funds, however, Mair stated emphatically that he'll have to have a better over-all budgetary assessment of the branch:

Mair also had a few interesting comments on outstanding issues within his jurisdiction:

● On the question of wolf control: "The wolf is not a problem . . . some wolves are." Mair added that the problem was blown out of propostion and said his current trip to Sweden might provide a few clues. "Apparently they have the situation under control there."

● On the Cowichan Estuary Task Force report: "It's always going to be an unsatisfactory situation. I guess the point now is to make it as satisfactory as possible under the circumstances." He said there was no way to move industry out of the estuary but added: "I think we can do a great deal to lessen the impact of their operation and reclaim ground as a result."

● On the federal Fisheries Act: "That's where we've got the hammer now." Speaking "philosophically", Mair explained: "I don't regard it as a good deal to trade one resource for another . . . to trade some trees for a salmon run."

● On 2,4-D control of Eurasian water milfoil: "We're going to go ahead with the program that we have for the use of 2,4-D. We're trying to do it to save the watersheds. Machinery has a limited value." On possible confrontation tactics by objectors: "I expect to have some problems but — and I don't mean this to be hard — we're not going to tolerate any foolishness this year."

● On multiple-use: "I would like to see all the forests of British Columbia remain virgin — it would be fantastic — except the province would go bankrupt. Those who are realistic about it realize we have to make some sort of accomodation. The question is how we do it." He added it was unfortunate it has always "seemed to be an either-or situation." "I'm not sure it has to be like that — guns and fire all the time."

The sentiments of numerous outdoors people in this province were reflected in another statement by Mair.

"Surely to God we can do better than we've been doing."

Got to Forget It, Says Netminder

By Canadian Press

"You've just got to forget it and not look at your average for a few weeks."

Those were the sad words from goaltender Gary Bromley after Vancouver Canucks were thrashed 11-1 by Montreal Canadiens Thursday in a National Hockey League game at Montreal.

"I guess we hit them at a bad time," Bromley said of the fact Montreal had suffered two losses and one tie in its four previous games. "I haven't had one like that before."

The Canadiens are not accustomed to collecting only three points in four games and the defending NHL champions were expected to break out after a 2-2 tie with Washington Capitals on Monday and a 5-3 loss to Detroit Red Wings the previous Saturday.

In fact, Bromley allowed only nine of the Montreal goals, with the last two being scored against second-string goalie Dunc Wilson in the last five minutes of the game. Bromley was hit in the mask by a deflected shot with 4:17 to play and was replaced by Wilson. The Vancouver duo faced 46 shots, while their clubmates got only 26 shots at Montreal goalie Ken Dryden.

In other games Thursday, Atlanta Flames dumped Boston Bruins 7-5, Chicago Black Hawks whipped Philadelphia Flyers 5-1 and Buffalo Sabres outlasted Los Angeles Kings 6-4.

Centre Jacques Lemaire was the offensive star of the game with three goals and two assists. Steve Shutt, Lemaire's left winger, had two goals and one assist, while Guy Lafleur, on the line's right wing, collected three assists.

Mario Tremblay added two goals for Montreal, with the others by Bob Gainey, Pierre Mondou, Rejean Houle and Cam Connor — the first of his NHL career. Connor also collected two assists to raise his point total for the season to four after 21 games.

Connor, who became a free agent after four seasons with Houston Aeros of the World Hockey Association when the team disbanded a year ago, is a rookie by NHL standards.

"I can put a puck in the net, but I've had my share of problems," Connor said.

Wayne Alters Attitude After Judy Talks Tough

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — A change in attitude — prompted by some stern lectures from his wife Judy — was the key factor in the turnaround of Wayne Levi's golfing fortunes.

"Attitude, that's the whole thing," he said Thursday after a firing a 68 which gave him a share of the first-round lead in the $300,000 Inverrary golf tournament. "It's a change in attitude, and it's all because of my wife.

"We got married last October. She's very much sports-oriented. I'd been hitting the ball pretty good for a couple of years, but I'd let myself get upset about a bad shot and then go along and miss a short putt I should have made for birdie.

"She saw it right away. And she got on my case real bad. I needed that tough talk. It was just exactly what I needed. Now I don't let a bad shot bother me. I don't give up. I keep on playing as hard as I can."

Levi, 26, and tour veteran Tommy Aaron, who share the same birthday — Feb. 23, but separated by 16 years — had matching 66s Thursday and were a single shot in front of Larry Nelson.

The group at 68 was made up of British Ryder Cup player Mark James, Australian veteran Bruce Devlin and Charles Coody.

Ray Floyd, Jim Simons, Mark Hayes, U.S. Open champ Andy North and Tom Purtzer were at 69, three shots under par on the 7,127 yard Inverrary Country Club course.

Lovett On Designing? He Loves It!

AROUND OUR SHORES

It all began in the early 1970s when Sidney shipwright John Lovett began earning a reputation for his quality work, completed in record time.

In those days he turned out more than a dozen Fortune 30s, which were designed by Bob Fortune, who was then the Canadian Broadcasting Company's weatherman.

The bug bit and since then John has been spending more and more time at his own drawing board.

The first boat he designed was the 21-foot Pacific Pilot, of which seven were built. He did all the development work then turned the project over to others once the boat was ready for volume production.

In just over three months the Pacific Pilot 27 has gone from the drawing board to a completed hull and deck boat with shipwright David Betts and others lending John a hand.

John began the design and tooling in October and the first prototype was ready for delivery in early February.

She's designed to appeal to boaters who are uptight about rising fuel costs and want to sail in winter, protected by an enclosed pilot-house.

Other Pacific Pilot 27s are already being built and both of John's designs are available through National Boat Sales.

He's now working with National's Dick Chudley on a 23-foot diesel cruiser which will be called the Coaster 23.

Bill Sloan of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club surprised a lot of people on the weekend by winning the Thunderbird winter championships, held at Cadboro Bay, with three firsts and a fourth.

Bill has only been sailing for four years but has set his sights on doing well in the Thunderbird world championships, to be held July 6-13 at the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club. Len Wilkins of Los Angeles is the current champion.

He set about preparing his boat Desire with the zeal of an America's Cup contender. He had Peter Dennis, one of his crew, do a thorough job of his deck gear. Peter, along with John McCarvill, runs the local North sail loft and Desire was fitted with a brand new suit of sails, made in North's latest design for Thunderbirds.

Her bottom was cleaned and smoothed to perfection.

Like any smart skipper that wants to win he put a crew together that had the potential, using Vancouver sailmaker Dave Miller as his helmsman.

It was the first time in Thunderbirds for Miller but it won't be the last. He intends entering the worlds in his own boat while Bill will have well-known Vancouver sailor Don Martin as his helmsman. Between now and then Dave and Bill intend racing off against each other to get their boats and crews in the best condition possible.

This is the sort of planning and devotion that pays off, even against the top-notch sailors in the local Thunderbird fleet, and it will be interesting to see how Desire makes out in the upcoming spring championships and, finally, the worlds.

Gary Cooney's Hocus placed second on the weekend. Veteran competitor Bob Grundison's Owl came third and John Booth, who builds fiberglass Thunderbirds, came fourth in his Umpka.

The Canoe Bay Sailing Club has a 12-mile race to D'Arcy Shoals and back set for Sunday. The start will be 9:30 a.m. in the vicinity of the government wharf at Sidney.

Thirty-one boats took part in the club's six-miler on Saturday, Roger Vale's Temenos being the over-all winner. She edged out Larry Mofford's Main Brace, Olger Brix's Caliente, Don Wilson's Menehune, Jack Miller's Scrimshander, Cam Thomson's Cal-Lorri, Gordie Inglis' Water Mellon, Jack Patterson's Leesome, Daryl Foster's Tzonqua and John Barker's Interlude.

The Turkey Head Sailing Association will have two around-the-buoys races in waters off Oak Bay Marina on Sunday. Start times are 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

RVYC dinghy sailors will have series racing in Cadboro Bay on Saturday. The first race will get under way at 1:30 p.m.

Kerry Noble is in charge of a sortie down the Cowichan River, planned by the Victoria Canoe Club for Sunday. Members will meet at the Helmcken Road parking area at 11 a.m. Ken can be reached at 479-1979 if you need more information.

Cathy Sherk Two Strokes From Leaders

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vicki Fergon, a virtual unknown on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, fired a four-under-par 68 Thursday to share the first-round lead with two veterans, while Canadian rookie Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., was only two back after 18 holes of the $100,000 Sunstar golf tournament.

Fergon, 23, who ranked 62nd on the LPGA money-winning list last year, was tied with Sandra Spuzich and Jerilyn Britz entering today's second round of the 72-hole event.

Fergon and Spuzich both had five birdies and one bogey over the 6,268-yard, par 37-35 Rancho Park golf course, and each had nines of 34-34. Britz had six birdies and two bogeys in shooting a 35-33.

Dale Shaw of Victoria fired struggled to an 80.

The first round was delayed for 30 minutes because of early-morning fog, but most of the 103 pros and five amateurs played under generally good conditions.

Reasons for Poor Start?

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuter) — A beheaded black chicken and a number of eggs dug from the pitch of a leading Nairobi soccer club are believed to be talismans of witchcraft, a team official says.

Players, officials and fans of the club trooped around the pitch digging them up during a practice this week.

"Our fans seized them but I don't know where they were taken," the official said, adding that it was not possible to say whether the chicken and eggs had caused the club's poor start in its league this season.

SMU Extends Win Streak

St. Michael's University School continued its undefeated march Thursday in the Greater Victoria High School Rugby League.

Oak Bay pulled into third place by defeating Mt. Douglas 17-6 while in Hodgkins Division action Lambrick Park surprised Belmont 15-12 and St. Michael's B squad overpowered Reynolds 32-0 to pull into a tie for second place with Belmont.

Ken Macfarlane was the on-field architect in the Lambrick victory. Macfarlane scored a try, two conversions and a penalty goal while Jerry Enders added a try. Roy Buchanan, with two, and Mark Edgington scored tries for Belmont.

A scheduled Parkland-Claremont game was postponed until today.

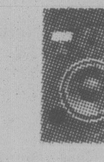
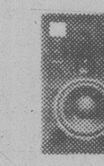
L 19 For professionals who need an accurate reproducer in control rooms where space is limited, JBL recently created a broadcast monitor. Its outstanding performance immediately won enthusiastic acclaim from the broadcast and recording industries. The L 19 is the acoustically identical home version of this superb loudspeaker.
199.95 ea.

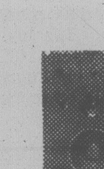
L 40 New techniques in acoustical analysis and computer simulation were applied to create and refine the L 40. The same high frequency dome radiator used in the L 110 and a uniquely damped low frequency loudspeaker give the L 40 performance unprecedented in a two-way system.
289.95 ea.



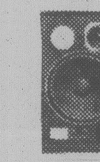
L 50 JBL's least expensive three-way design combines outstanding drivers in a vertical line array, controlled by a complex frequency dividing network. The thorough, advanced engineering of the L 50 has resulted in highly accurate, natural sound reproduction that cannot be matched in its price range.
379.95 ea.



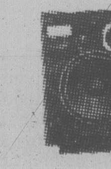
L 110 Based on the technology that produced the L 212, the L 110 is a three-way system that employs the same principles of wide, consistent frequency response and dispersion to approach the realism of the L 212 in a bookshelf enclosure. An advanced, sophisticated crossover network and drivers mounted in a vertical line array contribute to the L 110's remarkable performance.
479.95 ea.



L 166 Combining the wide dispersion of a dome radiator, the smooth response of an acoustically isolated midrange loudspeaker, and the authoritative bass performance of a 300 mm low frequency loudspeaker, the L 166 is an outstanding, powerful performer in a bookshelf enclosure. The completely new grille material achieves very high acoustic transparency.
599.95 ea.



L 65 The L 65 employs the same high frequency ring radiator used in the L 300 and the larger JBL professional studio monitors for unsurpassed power capacity and very wide dispersion. The midrange and low frequency loudspeakers are specifically designed for this system, and a smoked glass top provides both a decorative accent and a practical, easily maintained surface.
729.95 ea.



NEW
L 220 The JBL L 220 offers accurate, studio quality reproduction, precise definition — the results of advanced and innovative engineering — and striking visual design, modern and handsome. Yet the L220 is a product of the JBL tradition of fine craftsmanship and attention to detail, a tradition extending back to the origins of the audio industry.
999.95 ea.

L 212 The most advanced, most uncompromising loudspeaker system built by JBL. Two slender left and right channel elements provide extremely wide, consistent dispersion of sound from 70 Hz to frequencies beyond the upper limit of hearing. A third, non-directional element, the Ultrabass, contains a loudspeaker equipped with its own equalized amplifier to reproduce the lowest fundamentals in music with tight control. The L 212 is a completely new standard for loudspeaker performance and for the listening experience.

L 300 The L 300 is the home versionof JBL's most popular full-sized professional studio monitor-housed in an elegant superbly crafted enclosure of hand-finished walnut with a smoked glass top. It excels in definition, efficiency, heavy-duty power capacity and control-room accuracy — the very qualities studio engineers expect from JBL.

1. Impossible. Two notrump indicates 22-to-24 points, balanced distribution and all-around strength. Having spoken his piece by opening two notrump, South cannot logically raise three spades to six when North may have only 2 or 3 high-card points for his bid. It must be wrong to punish partner for bidding when he may simply be trying to get to game. If there is a slam in the hand — let's say North has 10 points — the impetus must come from him.

2. Possible. In general, when responder names a new suit, that bid is forcing. But there is an exception to this rule if the opener limits his high-card values by a rebid of one notrump. Two clubs may therefore be passed. With a game-going hand, North could jump to three clubs to force South to bid again.

3. Possible. Four notrump is not Blackwood in this sequence and South may pass with a bare 16 points. North probably has 15 or 16 points and is merely suggesting the possibility of a slam in notrump.

4. Impossible. Two diamonds was a jump-shift response indicating 17 or more points and at least mild interest in a slam. It necessarily follows that a game contract must be reached. North is probably still angling for a slam but is seeking more information.

5. Impossible. Two notrump indicated 13 to 15 points and committed the partnership to at least a game. South cannot blow hot and cold by first making a bid forcing to game and then changing his mind a moment later. Presumably North is unhappy with notrump, but that doesn't mean South can pass.

"You can just see her brother Fred away down the beach on his bike."

Andy nodded. "So you've just get those two kids" he commented. "How old is the boy?"

Steve thought a moment. "Well, if you add Betty's age to its square you'll get one less than three times the square of Fred's age."

What are the ages?

Farmers Miss Boat On Fast-Food Buck

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

A provincial agriculture study says B.C. producers are making virtually no effort to supply the lucrative fast food market — hamburger, pizza and fried chicken outlets — in the province.

In a report released Thursday, the legislature's agriculture committee recommended B.C. suppliers make a greater effort to study the fast food industry and satisfy its supply demands.

The committee's lengthy 160-page report — one of 80 from the $3 million two-year study which is nearing the end of its mandate — also recommends Statistics Canada keep a closer watch on the food service industry.

Fast food outlets are much healthier than the table service restaurants, nearly doubling their profit percentages in a four-year period from 6.7 per cent in 1972 to 12.5 per cent in 1976.

During this period,table service restaurants dropped from 6.0 per cent to 4.1 per cent.

The bankruptcy rate for restaurants in Canada has been at a consistently high level for more than a decade, peaking in 1975 when industry losses reached $14.1 million.

The B.C. restaurant industry provides upwards of 60,000 jobs in peak times with a payroll estimated to be $250 million.

The study found, that like department stores, food service outlets employ a large number of part-time emloyees in an attempt to keep their wage bill at a minimum and their fringe benefits as low as possible.

Another of the series of reports found that convenience stores have a secure place in the marketplace because of their convenience.

Despite the fact corner store prices are on the average 23 per cent higher than supermarket prices, consumers will still patronize them because of the convenience factor.

Chain convenience stores have higher prices than individually owned corner stores. In the case of a margarine product surveyed by the committee, the price in a chain convenience store was 58 per cent higher than supermarket price.

The highest price mark-up in an independent convenience store was found to be 33 per cent.

The study found, however, that in some areas the price mark-ups are less significant. In Victoria for exaample, corner store prices averaged only five per cent above supermarket prices.

The latest trend is for major oil companies to develop their own style of gas/grocery outlets.

Shell has grocery service in the prairie provinces, Ontario and Quebec and has plans to move into B.C. soon.

Housing Trend Steady

Housing starts in the Victoria area during February were strong for single-family homes and weak for apartment units, continuing the trend of the past six months.

There were 88 starts during the month, down from 116 the previous February. But there were 76 starts of single family homes, up from 42 in the same month last year.

There were 129 recently constructed single family homes on the market at month's end, down from 196 at the same time last year.

There were only seven recently completed condominiums on the market (although a large number of older condominiums are available). There were 82 recently-completed apartment units vacant as of the end of February.

Car Hits Pole Injuring Two

Two 18-year-olds were taken to Victoria General Hospital after their car hit a lamp standard at Johnson and Harrison shortly before 1 a.m. today.

Driver Michael Walcer, 1597 Monterey, was treated for cuts and released.

Police said the car is a write-off and that about $500 damage was done to the lamp standard which was sheered off at the base.

Hinton retired from the Canadian armed forces two years ago, his last position being base commander, CFB Esquimalt.

He is a past director of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce and a director of the Social Planning and Review Council of B.C. and president of the United Way of B.C.

He has served as vice-chairman of the local United Way campaign and as a member of the executive committee.

Provincial Ban on Herbicides Hailed by Environmentalists

Environmentalists today hailed a provincial ban on two suspect herbicides.

The ban on the sale and use of 2,4,5-T and 2,4,5,-TP, announced by Environment Minister Rafe Mair, will remain in effect until June 30.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency halted the use of the two broadleaf plant killers after a disturbing number of miscarriages occurred in Alsea, Ore.

"The ban is all to the good," commented Douglas Turnbull, of the Victoria Natural History Society.

"There appears to be some doubt as to the possible dangers in the use of this material."

"Better to be safe than sorry," said Bruce Hardy, a member of the Sierra Club who said he was commenting as an individual.

"I'm happy they have banned it pending study. The long-term effects are so subtle; it's not the sort of thing you can tote up with hospital statistics."

Derrick Mallard, spokesman for Citizens Association to Save the Environment, said the fact Mair had taken action could lead to a permanent ban, for which CASE had been striving since 1969.

Mair said environment ministry staff had looked into the herbicide situation in the U.S. and recommended the ban until more studies are done.

He said he would ask the federal government to suspend the chemicals until the province had completed its investigation.

Highly toxic dioxin is the active ingredient in 2,4,5-T used to kill deciduous trees and to clear brush from right-of-ways.

Robert Hosking, president of the Eastern Washington Timber Association, said the ban will mean higher lumber prices because evergreen species will be stunted by the competing broadleaf trees in timber stands.

Murder Victim's ID Found At Home of Accused Man

Identification belonging to 17-year-old Susan Marie Calve was found in the backyard incinerator at the home of Sidney Blair Rhodes, 22, the day she was found stabbed to death, an Assize Court jury was told Thursday.

The prosecution is alleging that Rhodes killed Calve Oct. 12. Her naked body was found in a wood near Cedar Hill Community Centre on the evening of Oct. 14.

The accused man's father, Sidney Rhodes, said the passport and other articles of Calve's identification were found in the incinerator Oct. 14. His son said he would take it back.

But a friend of the son, Clyde Ripka, who was staying temporarily at the house, said Rhodes didn't return the identification and told him that if his parents asked about it to say it was returned.

Ripka also said Rhodes told his parents the passport must have been left from a house party three weeks earlier. A previous witness, Diane Watson, testified Calve always carried her passport with her and she had it with her at noon Oct. 12.

Mrs. Georgie Rhodes, mother of the accused, testified her son arrived home about 3:50 p.m. Oct. 12 and had blood on his hands and on his cheek but not his clothing. The son said he had been in a fight at the Ingraham Hotel with someone he had been playing pool with.

When Calve's identification was found in the incinerator, she did not know the girl was missing. When she read the newspaper Oct. 15, she phoned Saanich police.

Rhodes father said he, Ripka and his son did some drywalling on the evening of Oct. 12 and went for a drink at the Tally-Ho beer parlor about 7:40 p.m. He stayed until about 9:40 p.m. and left them there.

He said he owned a knife with a five-inch blade which went missing around Labor Day weekend. But he agreed he had taken the knife on a fishing trip without his son and it was possible he lost it then.

Steven Potts said he was at the Tally-Ho Oct. 12, saw Rhodes, had some drinks with him and he drove Rhodes and Ripka home. He said Rhodes condition appeared all right and he did not see any fight that night.

He dropped Ripka off near the Rhodes house but Rhodes asked to be driven a little farther because he was going to see friends. He got out at the Cedar Hill Community Centre. He didn't see where Rhodes went.

Ripka said on the morning of Oct. 12 he and Rhodes went downtown to the courthouse where Ripka had to be present for a traffic matter. But Rhodes left and he couldn't find him.

He got in touch with him in the afternoon and testified Rhodes told him he had been in a fight at the Ingraham and had been answering questions at Victoria police station for a few hours.

Describing the visit to the Tally-Ho that evening, he said he was "quite under the weather" but Rhodes wasn't drinking as much. When Potts stopped his vehicle, he said Rhodes told him to go home because "I've got to go off with this guy and make a dope deal."

The next morning, he said Rhodes told him he had got into a fight with the man who drove them home and showed him pants and shoes with blood on them.

Ripka said he saw no fight the previous night.

He also said Rhodes had said almost every day he was staying with him that he was looking for MDA. He described Rhodes as "a little more hyper than normal" rushing around getting materials ready for drywalling in his house.

Two employees of the Ingraham beer parlor, tapman Walter Ostafychuk and assistant manager Douglas Craig, said they saw no fights or disturbances between 9:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. on Oct. 12.

Ramona Lackner testified she visited her boyfriend's in the afternoon of Oct. 14 and Rhodes came over. She noticed stains on his clothes and shoes.

She said Rhodes told her he had been in a fight at the Tally-Ho over a pool game the night of Oct. 12 and that blood had spurted on his leg.

Two witnesses, Cheryl Pilcher and Sabrina Bruehler, testified that on the evening of Oct. 13 Rhodes and others visited them and Rhodes suddenly injected the subject of rape and murder into a conversation about something else.

Pilcher said Rhodes suddenly asked her what should happen to a man who rapes a woman. She replied the man should be castrated.

Rhodes said rape wasn't too cool and said it was all right for a man to kill a man on a one-to-one basis but not a woman unless for a reason, such as if she was playing around.

Later than evening, when the others had passed out or gone to bed, she said Rhodes ordered her to stay awake and talk with him.

Out of the blue, she said, he reached over and put his arm up to her neck and said "I could rape you if I want to."

The trial has heard from 31 witnesses in the first four days. The jury was excused Thursday until Monday morning while Mr. Justice D.E. Andrews considers matters in their absence.

Style Rip-Off Deserved?

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Canadian women who insist on buying imported clothing are being ripped off — and deserve to be, says fashion designer Hugh Garber.

The Toronto-based designer said in a recent interview that Canadian women should have more faith in their country's fashion industry and rely less on imports from the U.S. and Europe.

"Canadian women lack confidence in anything Canadian and seem to prefer buying imports."

He says they don't realize that transportation costs and duty are added on to the purchase price and that a $300 dress may really be worth only $100.

Years ago, Canadians were forced to buy fashion imports to get good quality and styling, he says, but that has changed. There now are several talented Canadian designers turning out stylish, good quality fashion.

Ball Over, House Pumpkin Again

By BARBARA GAMAREKIAN
New York Times

WASHINGTON — The house on 30th Street has turned back into a pumpkin. For three short days — like Cinderella's coach — it was a glittery showcase of softly patterned rugs, pink peonies in crystal bowls, re-lacquered chairs with snow-white cushions, quilted Kelly green modular furniture and plump cushions in shades of lavender, apricot and raspberry.

It was all dressed up, ready for a photography session with House & Garden magazine.

But now, three months later, it is once again comfortably shabby. The brown bentwood chairs have been reclaimed from the cellar, where the folks from House & Garden had banished them; the chrome and glass coffee table has been trundled from the kitchen back into the front parlor, and the seven-year-old beige-and-white-striped sofa is once again in front of the fireplace, along with the two slightly tired-looking ficus trees that had been relegated to the garden.

When a Washington lawyer, Steven Martindale, bought the handsome Victorian house in Georgetown with its 16-foot-ceilings, five fireplaces and spectacular moldings a year ago, he had no grand design in mind.

"I was just going to paint the walls an off-white and stain the floors walnut, and not make a big production out of it," he said.

But an old friend, Lucretia Robertson, a New York interior designer, offered to decorate the house for a minimum fee if he would permit House & Garden to photograph the results.

"I jumped at it," recalled Martindale, adding with a shrug and a smile, "they could have put it in Sears, Roebuck for all I cared."

Walls were painted biscuit, moldings in shades of vanilla, shell and oyster white and the floors were bleached and polished. There was a debate over the floors.

"Not being a New Yorker, I didn't know it was considered hip to have white floors," said Martindale.

The modular furniture arrived two months before the scheduled photography, with a request ("which we ignored," he said) that no one sit on it.

It wasn't until the magazine staff, headed by Carolyn Sollis, landed on his doorstep one morning — asking if the slipcovers had arrived — that Martindale realized that his life had been taken over by forces beyond his control.

"All my stuff was chucked and piled under the stairs; they hated everything I owned," he said with a sheepish grin.

"It was a small army, and they were laden: straw baskets, can lights, patchwork quilts, swatches and rolls of fabric, tortoise-shell and lacquered boxes, vases of orchids, three dozen geranium plants, five new ficus trees — and a sewing machine."

"You should see what they've done to Steven's bedroom," confided Fiona Dewar-Charlton, one of the four Washingtonians who share the sprawling house with Martindale.

It was the second day of the transformation, and she had sought refuge in the garden from the bustling chaos. The phone rang incessantly, and the doorbell pealed periodically with another delivery as tables, trays, lamps, vases, linens and more flowers streamed in. A load of books was delivered and arranged tastefully on somewhat barren shelves.

"They've completely rebuilt the whole fireplace — I had to send measurements up to New York by phone. It's slotted in for the time being, but Steven can keep it for half price," she said.

She giggled conspiratorially. "Not even the trees are ours."

"We're busy doing presto change-o in Steven's bedroom," Jane Chin of House & Garden announced as she bounced into the garden. She had been upstairs, slipcovering pillows and running up an overskirt for the dining room table from Geoffrey Beene sheets.

When Martindale arrived home at midnight, he found, neatly pinned to the pristine, navy-blue sheets on his bed, a note that read, "You can sleep in the sheets if you want."

Asked whether House & Garden normally brought in carloads of furniture when it did a photo layout, Carol Sollis explained: "We have a group of editors who will go in and photograph a room or house as is, just adding a flower or two. And then there are design projects that involve bringing in merchandise and giving credits to show that everything is available for the reader to purchase. This was sort of a combination project. It's a super house but he had no furniture of his own — he just had some junky stuff and we were trying to show how a young bachelor could create a life style."

Steve Martindale's house appeared in all its peony pink and green glory in the October issue of House & Garden. But back on 30th Street, there is still no rug on the floor, and dinner parties have the help of lots of candlelight to soften the still sparsely furnished rooms. Martindale did purchase some of the modular furniture at cost.

But, he confided, he resold it to Steve Gambaro, a friend down the street, "who has a wonderful house with gray walls and a white floor — it looks perfect there.

Place to Sleep? Take Care

Youth on the Move

By LUCY IZON

LONDON — The first concern of most young travellers is finding a cheap, safe, clean place to sleep.

But be careful.

Chances are, when you arrive at the dock or railroad station, you'll be handed a card promoting a hostel or youth hotel. A number of these establishments are so questionable — security is thin, safety regulations are lax — that there's a move afoot to close them.

Best bet for checking them out is to go to the nearest tourist information office, where a complaints register is kept.

The London Tourist Board operates a special budget accommodation service near platform 15 of Victoria Station, a main departure point in London. For about $1, they reserve a room with breakfast while you wait — a service that can save a lot of grief. Prices start under $8 for a double and $9 for a single, less if rented by the week.

Other tourist information offices are located at 26 Grosvenor Gdns., near Victoria Station; Heathrow and Gatwick airports; Selfridges at Oxford St., Harrods at Knightsbridge, the main gate at the Tower of London. There is a Welcome to Britian centre at 64 St. James' St., off Piccadilly. Canada House is located at Trafalgar Square, entrance on Pall Mall E. (629-9492).

There are four International Youth Hostels operating in London this summer. Rates vary, according to age, from $2.50 to $5.

The Carter Lane Youth Hostel, 36 Carter Lane (236-4965) can be reached by taking the subway to St. Paul's. Earl's Court Youth Hostel, 38 Bolton Gdns. (373-7083) can be reached from Earl's Court subway. Higate Youth Hostel, 84 Higate West Hill Cres. (340-1831) is near the Archway. Holland House Youth Hostel, in beautiful Holland Park (937-0748) is near the Kensington High Street.

If you're strapped for funds or looking for friends, there's always Tent City (743-5708). Take bus 105 from Heathrow Airport; from the centre of the city, it's accessible by subway from the East Acton stop. There are 16 large tents with room for 500 people at $2.50 a night. The city opens June 4.

Victoria Travel, across from Victoria Station, at 52 Grosvenor Gdns., offers dorm accommodation in a student hostel with breakfast for under $8 a night. In the summer, they rent university residence rooms for about $11 a single.

Foreign students with International identification can get lodging from the International Students House, 229 Great Portland St. (01-636-9471). It's a club, across from the Great Portland subway station, for British and overseas students. It's open 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. daily and summer rates for foreign students run around $12 single, $10 double and $8 triple. If they're full, they try to find a hotel with a low triple rate of $6.

For about $2, you can become a visiting member for the minimum one month. There is a licensed bar, restaurant, library, information bureau, darkroom, some reduced tickets for theatre, concerts and sports events. They also have badminton, billiards, chess, karate, yoga, squash, debates and film nights.

After finding a place to stay, the next concern is getting around town. Public transport is the answer in London and there are free bus and subway maps at tourist board offices.

Birthday Party For School

The Metchosin School Museum Society will hold a birthday party March 18 to mark the 107th anniversary of the historic one-room schoolhouse in Metchosin, now used as a museum.

The party starts at 2 p.m. at St. Mary's parish hall, followed by a drive-past of members of the Horse and Buggy Driving Club of Victoria.

Syrup Without Maple Trees

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

...it tells you how

You can make homemade maple syrup the old-fashioned way from the sap of trees in your backyard or nearby woods and they don't need to be maple trees.

The famous sugar maple — Acer saccharum — doesn't grow in all parts of the country, but you still can make a tasty syrup because any species of maple, as well as hickory, birch, alder, butternut and black walnut trees, will produce sap. Although not as high in sugar content as Acer saccharum, all these saps can be turned into syrup.

Select your trees carefully because tapping may damage trees that measure less than 12 inches in diameter two feet above the ground. Trees larger than this size, however, will heal in about a year.

First, drill a hole one to two inches deep and ¾-inch diameter on each of your sap trees, just high enough to hang a pail under. Then, drive tight-fitting plastic or wooden tubes into the bores (be sure to leave a collection space in the back of each hole) and hang buckets, gallon cans or whatever below the tubes with a wire and nail. Remember to cover the containers to keep rain, snow, bark, etc. out of the sap.

Small amounts of the sap you collect can be cooked right in the kitchen. Put the liquid in a large pot and condense it by steaming the fluid at about 170 degrees F. The sap should not boil, so be sure to reduce the flame as the volume of liquid goes down.

Large batches of sap must be steamed down in a cast-iron cauldron or a commercial syrup steaming pan and should be cooked in a very well ventilated room or outdoors. Otherwise, the walls and ceilings of your house will be coated with sticky condensation.

Finally, when a cooled spoonful of the liquid acts syrupy, remove the pan from the stove, allow the syrup to cool and pour the finished product into jars.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I'm 17, pregnant, and not sure what I want to do about it. Some say I should marry the father, but I'm not sure who the father is because I was going with three guys at the same time.

I'm afraid of abortion, although I've heard there's nothing to it. I sure don't want to raise a kid without a husband, but I wouldn't feel right about giving it away to strangers, either.

I'm nearly three months along. Everybody I talk to tells me something different. I'm confused and need some good advice fast. — IN A MESS.

DEAR IN: Please quit talking to friends. Get some sound advice from a professional counsellor. Call Planned Parenthood. Tell them Abby told you to call for an appointment for counselling.

DEAR ABBY: I am happily married to a handsome, hard-working, successful executive. I've never had any reason to doubt him until last week. While hanging up his overcoat, a key from a local motel fell out of the pocket. Since we live in town, I wondered why my husband would need a motel room, so I asked him.

He told me he has a lot of business to talk over with his new secretary, and that he can't very well take her out to lunch because she's an attractive young divorcee with a reputation as a swinger, and people might talk. Since he values his reputation as a straight-laced family man, he rents a motel room occasionally so they can have lunch and talk business without stirring up gossip.

What do you think about this? — L.

DEAR L: Your husband says he's concerned about gossip. What does he think he'll cause if people find out he goes to a motel to talk business with his new secretary who's an attractive young divorcee with a reputation as a swinger?

DEAR ABBY: I discovered quite by accident that one of my children has an entirely different blood type than mine. I made some inquiries and have been informed that it is not possible for me to be this boy's father. Obviously my wife has been unfaithful to me.

After more than 12 years of a fairly happy marriage, I am at a loss as to what I should do.

Should I confront my wife with this and demand that she tell me the whole story? Or since there is nothing I can do about it now, should I keep my mouth shut and try to live with this very disturbing knowledge? — SHOCKED AND UNDECIDED.

DEAR SHOCKED: You have been misinformed. It is possible for a child to have an entirely different blood type than the father. So unless you have more conclusive evidence to support your suspicions, the word from here is cool it, Dad.

Congratulations ON YOUR RETIREMENT Jenny

Jenny Will Prove Hard Act to Follow

elizabeth forbes

There is no doubt the vim, vigor and zest with which Janet Ralph has filled the position of director of housekeeping at Gorge Road Hospital will make it a hard act to follow.

Mrs. Ralph (Jenny to everyone who knows her) retired at the end of February after 28 years dedication to the hospital, its patients and to her work.

She started in 1951 as a clean-up maid in the Victoria Nursing Home (forerunner of the present hospital) when it was housed in the Crow-Baker residence (Sissinghurst) on the Gorge Road property.

"I was given a bar of soap, an ordinary pail and a few rags and I got down on my hands and knees to wash the floors," she remembers.

The housekeeping staff included two girls in the kitchen and the clean-up maid.

In the home itself there were 40 elderly patients.

Looking back, Jenny Ralph laughs as she recalls how she often wanted to talk to those patients and to do little extra things for them, but it was off bounds.

"If we were caught, we were reprimanded. Now it is part of the on-going therapy.

She speaks of the black mahogany floors in the Crow-Baker home and of a lone hand mop and a hand polisher of sorts — all she had to help keep those floors shining.

She remembers a carpet that was donated for the entrance hall back in those days and how an army of bugs (creepy-crawlies she calls them) marched out from its edges, two days after it was down.

"We had to work fast to get rid of them."

She tells you, too, of a particularly bad snowstorm one winter when water rats moved up from the Gorge, got into the residence and in one night ate everything from a goodies cart that went the rounds of various rooms on certain days.

And she confesses that she doesn't think she would have stuck it out as a cleaning maid if she had not needed the money.

"We had a daughter born deaf. She was ready to go on from a Vancouver school to higher education at a college for the deaf in the United States. We needed the extra money to help send her to that college."

Early in 1955 when a 100-bed addition to the Victoria Nursing Home was opened (its now known as the rehabilitation or F. E. Winslow unit) the name of the place was changed to Gorge Road Hospital and Jenny Ralph was promoted to housekeeper.

"I had 10 girls on my staff," she recalls, "but I didn't have an office. I set up shop, with one chair and an old bureau for a desk, in the middle of one of the halls."

Shortly afterward, as maintainence became more and more important, R.C. Walker, then administrator, suggested that Mrs. Ralph assume the position of plant manager as well as housekeeper.

That was when she got her first small office and a new desk and chair.

It was from that office, too, in collaboration with Walker, that she organized a preventative maintainence scheme in which certain firms in the city were placed on a contract that saw them on call, if needed, 24 hours a day.

At the same time, in order to be prepared for any emergency, this determined woman learned something of the methods of the various trades, including how to change over from one boiler to another, without any loss of power.

"It scared the wits out of me at first, but I soon got used to it," she says.

By then the Gorge Road Hospital had gained a name as the best-kept hospital in B.C. It was growing, too, and work loads were changing.

Then came the excitement of two additions to the hospital — in 1965 a wing to include more treatment facilities for rehabilitation services (where the physiotheray and pool areas are maintained today) and in 1973 the opening of the new four-storey extended care Margaret Christie Wing, on the site of the Crow-Baker mansion.

Inevitably, as the hospital expanded the work load continued to increase, until it was impossible for Mrs. Ralph to handle both maintainence and housekeeping.

So the position was divided and she continued as housekeeping director, with an up-to-date office on the management floor, until she retired.

In her 28 years of service Janet Ralph saw the number of patients in residence grow from 40 in the Crow-Baker home to the present 400 with several hundred more in out-patient and day care clinics.

When she retired she was responsible for a housekeeping staff of 41 members.

She worked with three administrators, Mrs. Florence Mutrie, Walker and the present William Morrison; also with three directors of nursing, including the present Mrs. Pat Fullerton.

Despite her everyday responsibilities she was always an enthusiastic volunteer when the hospital auxiliary staged garden parties and bazaars and she was usually the first to offer a helping hand if management or board members needed it.

Its understandable, therefore, that in the past few weeks there has been an almost continuous round of parties, dinners and banquets in honor of this senior employee of the Gorge Hospital, coupled with the presentation of many wonderful gifts.

After a holiday down in Reno (where she says she is always lucky) Janet Ralph wants to join the Gorge Hospital Auxiliary and through its programs to continue in a work she has learned to love.

Taxes Worst Value for the Money

What's in Store
Joan Watson

The worst buy you get is the tax money you spend on governments.

If you tally up hidden and direct taxes to find out exactly what it costs as an individual for local, provincial and federal government you'd feel sick. Then if you could analyze what you get for your money, you'd feel worse.

Think of 10 things you get from your government you feel are worthwhile and of good value.

Then list 10 things you get that you don't like. You might have trouble with the first list, but no difficulty drawing up the second.

One of the worst consumer bargains in the country today is what we get, or don't get for our tax dollars. And not just the dollars you pay in income, property and retail sales tax. Don't forget hidden taxes that add about 40 per cent to your taxation burden.

Opinion polls show consistently that Canadians feel government must cut back spending. Our individual tax burdens are becoming intolerable. It wouldn't be so bad if we felt government was responsive to our needs. But governments seem to have a calculated program of withdrawing from contact with consumers and of cutting consumer services.

Even the few places governments do interface with consumers the contact is often abrasive or unsatisfactory. Box 99, the address consumers were encouraged to use for contact with the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs has been virtually disbanded.

In B.C., for example, you phone a number to get product information from a recording at the other end of the line. The government is becoming inaccessible.

When you buy your provincial car licence, I hope you receive courteous treatment. But you might share an experience similar to mine. I was told to get out of line and wait for a second clerk because I wanted a receipt for my $60. I was actually told I didn't need a receipt from the provincial government. Tell that to your federal tax man.

Surliness in a passport office is not uncommon. In Toronto, the form passed over the counter by an applicant was torn into four pieces and thrown in the garbage because the seeker had not filled in her address. She had to get a new form, take it back to her doctor's office for a second signature vouching for her identity and then go back to the office the next day and line up again. She missed her flight.

These are small irritations. More important is governments' withdrawal of funding for research and inspection services in the marketplace.

In one week, on the federal level, I ran into two cases of senior men who were concerned about their budgets for consumer protection. One man, in charge of scientific research for Health and Welfare was desperate for budget approval to keep his scientists for critical research into food and drug safety for consumers. His men had been offered double the money to move to the United States.

The second case is equally disturbing. This man's job is to keep the marketplace honest. He has about half the inspectors he needs to protect the consumers from fraud and short weight. He needs double the staff to do his job adequately for the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs. He needs double that again to take on the consumer protection that isn't touched at the present time, areas where flagrant consumer abuse abound.

He will probably get fewer inspectors than he has now. The government finds research and inspection easy areas to cut back on. It's only the consumers' safety and money that's involved.

Behind closed doors in Ottawa, the Department of Health and Welfare calls this avoidance of your problems deregulation. They want to go easier on business, leaving their conscience be their guide. Heaven help consumers.

Over at the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs they have a euphemism called regulatory reform which means fewer regulations, more latitude for business and industry.

Consumers have been notoriously bad at putting our case effectively before governments. Only little CAC, the Consumers Association of Canada, makes a stab at it. And I say little not to detract in any way from their efforts, but to point out that against the massive business lobbies, they're helpless.

Both government and industry are getting tougher on any small voice that dares dissent whether it's a squeak from the media or CAC.

It's not just the taxation that hurts. It's the disregard of the individual that has brought a deep resentment among consumers.

Never try to change the style set by the wig maker, warns a wig expert. It just won't work and you could wind up with a weird-looking wig. And use wig shampoo; any other detergent won't change hair fibres right away, but eventually the washings will break them down and cause the frizzies.

To whom it may concern:

During the past year the Municipal Staff has reviewed Schedule 'B' of By-Law No. 465, commonly known as "Central Saanich Engineering Specifications," making numerous amendments which are now in preparations for a final draft.

To better serve those affected, we desire input from all who deem themselves to have an interest in these regulations.

Therefore a complete set of Specifications and drawings will be made available, for perusal, in this office from 8:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., March 12-16, 1979.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Saul Levine, psychiatrist; Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

DEAR DR. LEVINE: I'm a 13-year-old girl who thinks she is going insane and needs help. You see, I always want to kill myself but I don't really want to die. I just want to get away from people and life for a while.

I really need someone to talk to like a counsellor or psychiatrist but I can't tell my father anything because he'll say "Oh, don't talk so stupid," then change the subject. So please try to help.

ANSWER: We see many young people with thoughts and feelings such as yours. Those feelings are very painful and frightening and we tend to feel that we are the only ones who think along those lines, that nobody else could be as lonely or as unhappy as we are. Unfortunately, they are not at all uncommon.

I agree that you need someone to help you with your scary feelings. It concerns me that you can't tell your father just how badly you feel. I've found that when things are really tough, it's often parents that kids turn to. Perhaps he doesn't realize how upset you are, and you haven't told him.

Young people can often hide their true feelings from their mothers and fathers. I would tell your parents. Now if this is really impossible, I suggest that you talk to an adult whom you respect, who might be able to get you help directly or give you help with your parents — your doctor, teacher, guidance counsellor, minister, etc.

DEAR DR. POWELL: I am a 13-year-old girl but look 15. A few days ago my boy-friend came up to my house because he wanted to see me. We talked and had fun. Later he phoned to ask why did I have to tell some of my friends.

Don't I have the right to just tell some of my friends that he just visited? He's in Grade 10 and is 15. He knows my real age and everything about me. Now he's really mad at me. What can I do?

ANSWER: Your experience proves that no one likes to have intimate details discussed with other friends. Your boy-friend did not wait to find out how much you told. When he found you had talked to your friends he became angry.

It is a lesson that everyone has to learn — not to talk about a relationship to friends who may repeat your story to others. This is sometimes called gossip and most people love to spread stories of others. It is not meant to be spiteful but it can have the consequence you have experienced.

You can try phoning your boy-friend and explaining you are sorry he was upset and that you did not tell your friends anything that happened between you. Having fun may be interpreted differently by different people and your friends may define it in wider terms than you do.

He may accept your apology, and you will then be more careful about talking to your friends. If he stays mad forget him. There are lots of other guys around but do not forget the lesson you have learned.

We'll Make You An Offer You Can't Refuse . . .

MO-PED
MO as in motor
PED as in pedal
Its like a strong bicycle that goes by itself. Its got pedals when you want them, a motor when you need it.
There are no oil levels to check, no clutch or gearshift to operate. If you can ride a bicycle, you can ride a Mo-Ped even better.
To enjoy the fun and economy of 200 + m.p.g. in B.C. you only need a regular driver's license or learner's permit (not Class 6), basic insurance, registration and license plate, $48. (Add $22 if under 25), a lightweight, comfortable helmet and a

309 IN MEMORIAM

ANSLEY— In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister Diane, who passed away Mar.9, 1973

Nothing but memories as we journey on
Thinking of the past and our loved one gone
No one knows the depths of our deep regret
But we remember when others forget.

— Loved and sadly missed by Mom, Dad, sisters, Debbie, Sandy and daughters Lora and Kaycie Lynn, grandmother and nephews.

GANNER — To the memory of beloved parents Raymond who passed away March 9, 1971, and Myrtle Florence April 3, 1976.

We still have the empty heartache,
We still shed many a tear
And always a loving memory
Of the parents we loved so dear.
To some they may be forgotten
To others a part of the past
But to us who really loved them
Their memory will always last.
The beautiful things they did for us,
Live within our hearts each day,
And keep them near and dear to us
Though they have passed away
To hear their voice, and see their smile,
To sit with them and talk awhile,
To be together in the same old way,
Would be our dearest wish today.
Goodnight Dad, Goodnight Mom.

—Remembered always by daughter Loretto Goddue, son-in-law Don and Grandchildren Myrtle and Family and Colleen.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUTE, SANDS

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies.
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

15 Degrees Brings on the Buzz

GARDENING

hilda beastall

After the satisfying rain early in the week came warm hours with little wind in this much-blessed corner of Vancouver Island. All kinds of new life became visible It seemed to me a time for learning, for observation of the small things that we overlook as the full flush of spring growth takes over.

First to be noticed was a solitary honey bee buzzing the gold and purple crocuses. The warm air at 15 degrees C. had opened these flower thermometers even though the sun was not shining at the time. On the next sunny warm day there will likely be dozens of bees around.

Snowdrops, single and elegant, and the doubles frilly and pretty, are almost at the end of an eight-week period of bloom. My project for that day was lifting a few clumps to have ready for placing into a new planting project being attempted this year. At least they will be in containers for instant use when needed.

Ornamental alliums (onions) have seeded in a dooryard bed that needs renovating so they, too, were lifted into containers for future use. Some of these things are not too easy to find when needed.

Some special daffodils will be left until leaves die down, for these resent root disturbance until that time. There are the tiny trumpet daffodils, Narcissus lobularis, one of the earliest to bloom, only 7 or 8 inches high, that I wouldn't want to loose; and others like the fine white N. 'Beersheba' so long lasting in bloom.

Down at ground level, more than a half dozen ladybugs were seen — brightly colored with black and white dots, but slow moving, they were on the warm concrete path, not on plants. When the inevitable aphids arrive on the new flowering shoots of honeysuckle I hope the ladybug population will have increased. There will be plentifuls meals for many. Hummingbirds account for the disappearance of hundreds of aphids if they arrive at the right moment.

Thanks to the heavy use of humus in the soil last fall, the worm population is active. Each trowelful of wet soil disturbed in the bulb lifting brings to light two or three of these useful creatures.

A watch is being kept for the garden snakes. They come to light as warmer temperatures tempt them out, but are apparently still sluggishly hidden beneath rock or stones.

A colony or two of these are looked for each spring. We have proved them efficient in the control of slugs, ants and even larvae in the waterlily tubs. With no insect killers put out on the ground to poison the unwanted insects, the snakes if present will do a good job if they are protected from harm.

New gardeners, especially from other countries or even from other parts of Canada, are at first alarmed when one of these harmless garden snakes is noticed sunning in a warm spot on an early spring day. Quite harmless, most beneficial for the gardener and the plants, these lowly creatures should be protected from harm by children and adults who believe that anything crawling on the ground must be killed.

Explain to them that the snakes are your garden friends. Demonstrate the fact by picking them up carefully, if you can. I haven't reached this stage yet, but have been defending them for 30-odd years against all marauders.

Cats unfortunately are attracted by the alithering motion of the snakes among plants and through grass, and often injure them. Crows then move in and carry them off.

One pathway where snakes had a home nearby could always be counted on to have one or two sunning in the open, but by stamping on the ground sharply before rounding the corner, they scurried to safety before one's arrival.

The first shrub flowers are seen on the white Daphne mezereum, the green D. laureola, yellow Forsythia, white Spiraea thunbergii and scarlet Cydonia japonica. Of such small beginnings are these earliest spring days. Make the most of them — they are fleeting.

Tory May Stall Shares

Tory leader Vic Stephens is considering Supreme Court action to stall the government's $3 million expenditure to distribute free shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp.

At a press conference today, Stephens said the special cabinet order approving the expenditures is a flagrant and dishonest abuse of parliament.

Quoting from the Financial Control Act, Stephens noted such special spending warrants can only be made when the expenditure is both unforeseen and urgently and immediately required for the public good.

The Tory leader said that for Finance Minister Evan Wolfe to suggest that this expenditure was not foreseen is either an admission of complete ignorance concerning the distribution of the BCRIC shares, or a deliberate intention to mislead the taxpayers of B.C.

The spending authorization is one of the most dictatorial acts we have seen since the signing of the Magna Carta, Stephens said.

Stephen, a lawyer, says he has two other lawyers researching the cabinet order.

If they support his findings he will challenge the order in Supreme Court.

The Oak Bay MLA said the money is not urgently and immediately required for the public good but is urgently and immediately needed by Premier Bill Bennett to promote "his purely political scheme to attempt to bribe the voters prior to the general election."

ANTI-SEALERS DYE PUPS BRIGHT RED

SEAFRONT STROLL on a sunshine day lifts the spirit, brightens the eye and more importantly, gets moms and toddlers out of the house. Walkers are shown wending way around curving steps at Clover point off Dallas Road in kind of weather that screams that spring, if not here yet, is just around corner.

HALIFAX (CP) — Fisheries officers and RCMP clashed violently early today on the Gulf of St. Lawrence with seal hunt protesters who had painted seal pups with dye before dawn.

Eight of the protesters were taken in custody aboard a Coast Guard icebreaker.

Stan Dudka, Canadian fisheries officer in charge of the seal hunt in the area, said he had been struck on the head by one individual who carried a stick "about six miles long."

Dudka said his head was swollen but neither he nor anybody else was seriously hurt in the clash.

He said the protesters had put up "fanatical resistance" when the Canadian enforcement authorities, including eight members of the RCMP, attempted to arrest them on the ice.

He said some of the protesters have been charged with resisting arrest and some of them with carrying concealed weapons.

One man carried a knife in a sheath but it was not used in the scuffle.

The protesters slipped over the side of the trawler Sea Shepherd before dawn to dye the pelts of the seals in an effort to render them worthless to seal hunters.

Dudka said Capt. L. Fewfter of the Sea Shepherd, about two miles from the seal herd, had been warned that he had put people over the side to commit violations of Canadian law and that he was in Canadian territorial waters.

"I warned him personally that if it is repeated he and his ship will be arrested."

Dudka said Fewfter acknowledged the message but did not indicate his intentions.

Dudka said he was not certain yet what would be done with the eight who had been arrested.

He said the Canadian authorities waited until the protesters were within a half a mile of the sealing operations, a violation of Canadian law for those not carrying special permits, before moving against them.

"We timed it."

He said that seal hunters and protesters at no time came into direct contact with each other.

Besides the eight Mounties involved, several Quebec provincial fisheries officers and five federal officers were involved in the arrest.

Well-known U.S. writer Cleveland Amory, one of the leaders of the protest group, said a number of men slipped over the side of the Sea Shepherd shortly after midnight, approached the Harp seal herd and applied bright-red, organic dye to the backs and rumps of the white-coated pups.

In Ottawa, Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said he has no authority to stop the Sea Shepherd from its voyage. He told the Commons the ship has the right of innocent passage and Canadian authorities could interfere with the ship only if she interferes with the hunt.

Horner Slaloms On PM's Ski Trip.

OTTAWA (CP) — Tourism Minister Jack Horner suggested to jeering opposition MPs Thursday that Prime Minister Trudeau had to ski at Vail, Colo., at Christmas because there are not enough ski resorts in Canada.

Watched by a smiling prime minister, he also set off jeers in his old party when he implied that Opposition Leader Joe Clark is not doing his job as MP for Rocky Mountain, Alta., in supporting resort development.

Replying to a suggestion from Conservative John Crosbie that Trudeau's American skiing is sinful when Canada suffered its largest-ever travel deficit last year, the minister said:

"What is sinful about it is that in Canada we have not developed enough ski resorts to keep people . . . ." The rest of his words were drowned by hoots and desk-thumping.

Liberals went into spasms of laughter, as Clark sought to reply. Later he demanded the government establish clearly whether national parks are meant for commercial uses or for preservation of the environment.

He got an acknowledgement from Hugh Faulkner, minister in charge of parks, that government policy is for most ski developments to be outside parks.

2 New Mishaps in Fish Fleet

One man is missing and an 80-foot fishing vessel was abandoned after it began taking on water early today in the two latest mishaps in the 1979 herring roe season.

Shortly after midnight Norman Puglas, 30, of Campbell River, fell over the side of a skiff from a 55-foot boat working in Barkley Sound.

The weather was reported good at the time.

A search was underway today involving the Canadian Coast Guard lifeboat from Bamfield, a Canadian armed forces Labrador helicopter, based at Tofino for the herring season, and the RCMP patrol vessel from Ucluelet.

The second incident occurred about 5 a.m. when the 80-foot Carina I began taking on water near Carmanah Point in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

The seven persons aboard abandoned ship and were taken aboard the fishing vessel Quesnel Lake. They were later transported to Port San Juan by skiff. There were no injuries and their names are also being withheld.

Meanwhile, the fisheries vessel Tanu was ordered to the scene to put extra pumps aboard.

A Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre spokesman said it is expected the Carina I will be salvaged.

In a related development, fisheries department officials are attempting to salvage a herring spawning study halted the day after it began when the boat carrying researchers caught fire and burned to the waterline.

Five persons, including the boat's owners and three researchers from the Nanaimo Biological Station, were forced to flee in a lifeboat when fire broke out in the engine room of the Point Hope.

There were no injuries.

The fire destroyed $50,000 worth of federal research equipment.

Alan Hourston, head of the Pacific Biological Station's herring program, said attempts will be made to carry out as much of the study as possible.

The purpose of the study was to develop improved ways of estimating the number of spawners in the herring stock.

Two More Banks Bombed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two more Vancouver-area banks were hit by similar firebombing attacks early today bringing the number of such incidents in the last three months to 22.

A Bank of Nova Scotia branch at 20555 56th Ave. in Langley was attacked shortly after midnight when a rock was thrown through a window and followed by a bomb.

But a passerby spotted the fire and alerted firemen quickly. Langley RCMP said damage was minimal.

The other attack occurred in Vancouver about two hours later at the Royal Bank of Canada branch in a shopping mall at 370 East Broadway. A front window in the bank was smashed and again followed by a firebomb. A passing policeman called firemen and there was little damage.

Dief to Pole

OTTAWA (CP) — Former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker says he is planning a trip to the North Pole after the next election.

The 83-year-old Tory MP told an open-line radio program , "That's one place I've always wanted to see . . . not that there's very much to see."

Still Snags, Says Carter

ALEXANDRIA (AP) — Presidents Carter of the United States and Anwar Sadat of Egypt held talks during a train ride along the Nile delta today, but appeared no closer to a breakthrough toward an Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

Sadat said he is ready to sign such a treaty, but that Israeli misunderstandings and mistrust block the way. He said that only "some words here or there" now separate Egypt and Israel.

In Israel, Prime Minister Menachem Begin spent three hours briefing his cabinet and said afterward: "Everything now depends on the Egyptian answer. Israel has done its part."

The Israeli cabinet has already accepted compromise suggestions offered by Carter, but Sadat is seeking some modifications. Carter is to relay Sadat's response to Begin on Saturday night.

Begin told a parliamentary committee that a positive response from Sadat would "pave the road to peace," but a negative response would be "Egypt's responsibility."

Carter, speaking to reporters as he and Sadat rode an open railway car from Cairo to this ancient port city, said: "We still have some problems, obviously."

But Carter said the talks are going "very well."

Said Sadat: "I'm doing my best. But without the intensive effort by President Carter and the American people . . . we would have never reached a position (in which a treaty is within reach)."

Meanwhile in Lebanon, leftist gunmen enforced a general strike in Moslem areas of the capital of Beirut to protest Carter's trip.

It's a Phoney Issue, Williams Tells Labor

Labor Minister Allan Williams said today the B.C. Federation of Labor's repeated claim he would like right-to-work legislation is a phoney issue.

The minister, under fire over a letter he wrote to Missouri asking about the defeat of a right-to-work law in that state, said federation president Jim Kinnaird is attempting to politicize the trade union movement in a way his predecessor never imagined.

The minister was responding to charges by Kinnaird that the Socred government has definite plans to bring in right to work legislation.

Kinnaird said the letter Williams wrote to Missouri is proof the Socreds have a similar plan for B.C.

Williams says he has repeatedly insisted the government is not designing, planning or even discussing such legislation.

Williams said he is practically and philisophically opposed to right to work legislation.

He said in the 75 years there has been a labor department in B.C., there have always been rights for workers to organize for the purpose of negotiating the terms of their employment with their employers.

"And the successes that have been achieved are very valuable to the working men and women of the province," he added.

Williams said the blame for all the controversy surrounding right to work lies directly on the shoulders of Kinnaird whose recent election to head the federation was heralded as the beginning of a new era of moderation in the labor movement.

Williams said Kinnaird should know better because

H-Bomb Article Called Explosive

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government says that publication of a magazine article entitled How a Hydrogen Bomb Works might cause "grave, direct, immediate and irreparable harm to the national security of the United States and its people."

The justice department said today that it has filed a civil suit in Madison, Wis., federal court to prevent The Progressive magazine from publishing the article.

Court documents supplied by the justice department said: "The article provides specific and detailed information concerning the design and operation of a hydrogen bomb, and certain technical information necessary to construct such a bomb."

Publication of the information "would increase the proliferation of nuclear weapons, and thereby severely undercut the arms control and disarmament policies of the United States," said the government's suit.

The suit says that publication of the article is "imminent" unless a temporary restraining order is granted by the court.

Named as defendants are the the magazine's parent firm in Madison, The Progressive Inc.; Erwin Knoll, the magazine's editor; Samuel Day, managing editor, and Howard Morland, the author of the article.

Knoll said in Madison that he has not seen the suit yet and his lawyer advised him not to answer questions about it. But he said his lawyer told him the government was planning some sort of "prior restraint."

Day also declined to comment directly on the suit.

The magazine, with a circulation of about 40,000, had planned to print the article in its April issue, due to be published next week, the editors said.

The government said the "secret restricted data" in the article, if published, "will increase the number of nations capable of constructing thermonuclear weapons and decrease the time it takes for these nations to develop such weapons."

The suit said the energy department received a copy of the article Feb. 27, with a cover letter from Day asking the department to "verify the technical accuracy of the information contained in the article."

An affadavit filed with the suit said Lynn Coleman, energy department general counsel, telephoned Day and Knoll asking that the article not be published.

The court papers said energy department officials also met with Knoll and Day and offered to help them edit the article so that sensitive data would not be disclosed.

But the affadavit said Gordon Sinykin, lawyer for the magazine, replied Wednesday that the magazine intended to publish the article.

TOWN TALK

Pardon us today as we celebrity-starved wretches indulge in some blatant society name-dropping, even if the Hungarian (via Palm Springs, Calif.) Connection is rather remote.

After all, it's not every day we can trot out three honest-to-goodness princes and a count. Not to mention, daarleengs, the mother and sister of ze delightfully zany Zsa Zsa Gabor.

Anyway, this is our story and we're sticking to it:

Victoria resident David Michael has a nephew of the same name who's a well-known sculptor in stone and is now displaying his works at a gallery in Palm Springs.

And among the guests at a recent showing were . . . wait for it . . . "Magda Gabor accompanied by The Prince Bourbon of Spain, Jolie Gabor and her husband The Count de Zigethy, The Prince Andrej of Yugoslavia, The Prince Holenlohe, Charles Le Maire, renowned designer and artist, and host Prince Umberto de Poliolo."

Now who says Town Talk is a parochial dollop of chit-chat full of dreary, commonplace names?

Maybe it's a sign of paranoia fed by infectious rumors of an impending provincial election, but there's a certain town burgher who barely escaped with his ears intact from the downtown Socred headquarters Thursday.

Seems this chap wanted to find out where to apply for his free shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corp., and assumed the people at Socred headquarters would know all about it.

The lady who came to his aid didn't know much about the shares, except how wonderful the government is for giving people a bit of the action. But there was little she didn't know about what a drubbing the Socreds were going to give the NDP next time around the polls, or what a dreadful man Dave Barrett is.

"It took me half an hour to get out of there," the citizen complained.

By election time — probably a year from now — she'll be all burned out.

Two of Greater Victoria's best-known narcotics officers, referred to by one and all on the street scene as Starsky and Hutch, are up to their old hardnose tricks again.

The pair, never noted for delicacy, stopped a 19-year-old on Yates Thursday afternoon, frisked him and then pushed him into their car.

As they drove off one of the officers let the youth have it with a backhand to the face followed by an assortment of punches. After driving a few blocks they pulled into an alley and told the youth to get out.

Now, by and large, citizens involved in dope deals are not Grade-A people.

But surely there must be another way to handle them and the job, difficult as it might be . . .

Those big, black limousines are getting to be quite a common sight along the Metchosin-William Head road, as visiting royalty and other assorted dignitaries and VIPs are driven out to Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific.

It's natural and understandable, of course, that there should be such interest in the multi-national college and its fine setting overlooking Pedder Bay.

But isn't the whole thing getting just a little one-sided, to the point where it has a faint tinge of educational elitism?

How about breaking with routine and taking the next VIP who hits town to Mount Doug or Vic High?

The Empress has just finished renovating 160 rooms and hotel manager Ted Balderson says there's more upgrading in the works.

Balderson says about $1 million will be spent this year in continuation of the project that's giving new lustre to Victoria's grande dame. The dining room and public areas are slated for work this fall.

He said, however, that contrary to some rumors that have been circulating recently, there are no major expansion plans in the works.

Scholarships are nice but the only fitting tribute to the late premier W.A.C. Bennett would be to erect a life-sized statue of him on the legislature lawn, according to realtor Eric Charman.

"Let's get started on this right away, while everyone remembers the contribution he made to our province," Charman says.

He feels that thousands of people would put up $5 each or more to finance the project.

"And the money should be collected by the Bank of B.C. That's the bank he fought for to end Eastern Canada's monopoly on the banking system."

At least one person will be relieved to hear that William Head prison is not going to close after all: Murray Barnes, whoever he is.

If you read those B.C. Government Employees Union ads you must know that good old Murray goes there every day. For you and me.

Lifestyle Change Skyrockets Price Of Indian Baskets

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Twenty years ago an Indian basket could be purchased in Victoria for a few dollars.

Today, the same basket — about six inches in diameter and four inches deep — may cost $150.

Larger and older ones sell for $500 or more, depending on its design and quality.

The rising prices reflect the changing lifestyles of Indian women, along with the general decline of an ancient craft which has never ceased to awe people, says Dr. Andrea Laforet of the Provincial Museum, an authority on Indian basketry.

"Fewer people are making baskets today," she said. "And the demand for baskets is increasing."

The combination is bound to force up prices.

She said 50 years ago native craftswomen made baskets for their own use and to sell. Now basket-making for domestic use is rare. On some reserves the craft is no longer practised.

"These work baskets today are much sought after by collectors," she said. "Some of the designs on them are superb."

Laforet is extension curator of the ethnology division of the museum. She is also responsible for the care and upkeep of more than 500 baskets, considered one of the finest collections in North America.

Several factors contributed to the decline of the craft, she said.

One was sending children to residential schools. They were away from their parents and could not be taught the skills.

A child usually started to learn basketry at aged six to eight. It might have taken several years before she could produce quality goods.

"Today many kids just haven't the opportunity to learn the craft. Then again the lifestyles of women have changed."

Laforet said baskets are made mainly from roots, bark and some sedges. Prior to contact with Europeans, Indians made all sorts of utensils for domestic use.

Some museum items, including waterproof hats, dated back to the 1880s.

Victorians will only have one opportunity to hear Laforet reveal some of the mysteries involved in basket-making because she is leaving soon to take up a position in the National Museum in Ottawa.

She will speak on the subject at the Newcombe auditorium on Tuesday, March 13, at 2 p.m.

"In Ottawa, I will still maintain contact with British Columbia," she said. "I will be responsible for material dealing with the culture of the Pacific West Coast Indians."

Street Singers Get Nod

They'll be singing in the streets this summer.

Victoria city council ruled Thursday night a proposal to restrict street musicians to groups of no more than two was decidedly off key.

The proposal, sparked by a complaint from a downtown businesswoman who said she could barely hear herself think because of sidewalk sonatas, was flatly rejected by council.

On another issue, council also voted down a law that would have seen hawkers banned from the Government Street Causeway.

Ald. Bill Tindall wanted to see the street vendors, who sell everything from hot sausages to ice cream, restricted to the old Ocean Cement site on the Inner Harbor.

But the majority of council agreed with Ald. Robin Blencoe and Ald. John Hayes who argued that the hawkers add a lot of life.

HOTELMAN ASKS FREE PRICING

'Prices Don't Stop Drinkers'

B.C.'s high liquor prices have done little if anything to moderate drinking patterns, the president of the B.C. Hotels Association said Thursday.

Ken Noble said in an interview from Kelowna that consumption is as high as it has ever been despite the fact B.C.'s prices are on average higher than Alberta and Ontario.

Noble's comment came after Liquor Distribution Branch general manager R.A. Wallace said in a Times story that B.C.'s liquor prices are designed to encourage moderation in the consumption of alcohol.

"I don't think price, at the liquor store level at least, has stopped anyone from drinking," Noble said.

Noble said if the government is really serious about trying to cut drinking it will allow a free pricing system similar to one in Alberta.

Under such a system hotel operators and restaurateurs can charge whatever the traffic will bear. In B.C. the prices on wines and beer are fixed.

Noble also feels there are too many licences.

He said the rising price of wine has had little effect. The only problem is operators are continuously forced to revise their prices which involves printing new lists, an extra cost.

He said the association has been meeting the government periodically to bring about changes.

"We've had assurances from the new minister (Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Jim Neilsen) he will look at these things. He gave us a positive approach.

"But," Noble added, "we aren't expecting any instant decisions."

The following table compares the price of 14 standard products in B.C., Alberta and Ontario. The prices were those in effect on Feb. 15 in each province.

B.C. liquor prices include a seven per cent provincial sales tax (although the general sales tax is only five per cent) while the Ontario prices include a 10 per cent provincial sales tax. Alberta has no provincial sales tax.

Alberta prices for wine and spirits are five cents higher than shown because there is a five-cent deposit system. Because the nickel is refundable, the price has been reduced five cents to make a fair comparison with the other provinces.

Fisher to Seek NDP Nomination

Greater Victoria school trustee Dr. Mark Fisher said today he will seek the NDP nomination for one of the two Victoria seats in the next provincial election.

The announcement comes four days after John Shields, president of the Victoria Labor Council, declared his intention of running for the NDP nomination.

Fisher said his main motive in running is a desire to "develop some insight and proper planning with respect to the provision of health care in the Victoria area."

A family physician here for 11 years, Fisher is now serving his third consecutive term on the Greater Victoria school board. He has also been on the Camosun College Council for four years.

Woman Dies In Fire

The woman was pronounced dead on arrival at Victoria General Hospital at about 7:30 p.m., an hour after the fire was reported by other tenants in the building.

Deputy fire chief Mike Heppell said there are indications the fire, confined to suite 208, may have been caused by careless smoking.

Meanwhile, police have released the name of a 43-year-old man found dead in an overflowing bathtub at the City Centre Motel, 855 Douglas Wednesday morning.

He was Alexander Joseph MacDonald of Rexdale, Ont.

$7.6 Million Grant For Camosun Work

The provincial government Thursday added $7,650,000 to $600,000 previously granted to Camosun College for a 100,000-square feet expansion on its Lansdowne campus.

But the college board is concerned that the entire undertaking may be threatened because of Greater Victoria school board's reluctance to accept a government offer for its adjoining property.

The college board decided at a meeting Thursday to encourage a three-party effort to resolve that problem, with the two boards and ministry of education getting together.

The ministry has said it will support the transfer of the school board's Paul Building to Camosun, but it is offering about $200,000 less than the $1.1 million the school board claims as the cost of moving.

Camosun trustees have no qualms with the school board's concern about what it deems proper compensation, especially as member Mark Fisher noted, the government has already paid the University of Victoria $4.5 million for its share of Lansdowne campus.

Camosun board also gave approval in principle to plans for a multi-purpose building by architect Terrence Williams, although full agreement on the property matter will have to be reached before construction starts.

$$ Bonus Backed

Ed Higgin, new president of the Victoria Information Centre, said Thursday he is surprised at the results of a survey done by a local radio station which showed that 19 of 20 downtown businesses disapprove of the exchange proposal.

New List for Police Board

Saanich council has submitted to Attorney-General Garde Gardom another list of possible appointees to fill one vacancy on the Saanich police board.

The move comes two months after a previous government appointee to the board, lawyer Robert Hutchison, resigned his position amid controversy and a threatened court action by the Saanich Police Association.

The five names forwarded by Saanich this week include two persons who were on an earlier list of Saanich recommendations which Gardom had ignored in favor of Hutchison: lawyer Alan J. Peterson and Pat Carfra, the wife of a lawyer.

The other three are Bill Neilson, a law professor at the University of Victoria, law student Don Johannessen and accountant Fred Worthington.

The municipality's submission makes it clear that Peterson and Carfra are the first and second preferences.

Saanich council and the police union had objected to the selection of Hutchison, who was appointed by the provincial cabinet Dec. 20.

The union launched B.C. Supreme Court action to have the appointment quashed, claiming that as Hutchison had acted against the union in wage negotiations and arbitration proceedings he could not be seen as objective.

Hutchison resigned because he said he didn't want to waste taxpayers' money in senseless litigation.

Kraft Special To Salute Pearl Bailey

Pearl Bailey, the celebrated woman of song and international goodwill, who, in her 40-year career has successfully played prominent roles as entertainer, humanitarian, diplomat and author, will be honored by a host of top stars performing with her in a musical variety entertainment special.

The third annual All Star Salute will be broadcast Wednesday, March 14, at 10 p.m. on Channel 7.

Featured in the special will be Jack Albertson, DeeDee Bellson, Louis Bellson, Beau Bridges, Foster Brooks, LeVar Burton, Ron Cey, Gary Coleman, Billy Daniels, Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Ella Fitzgerald, Rosey Grier, Rich Little, Ken Norton, Nipsey Russel.

Highlights of the musical-variety hour include a song-and-dance number teaming Mrs. Betty Ford, a former First Lady and dancer, and Miss Bailey with Louis Bellson and The Band, and a rollicking medley, Singin With a Band, that spotlights three performers who are First Lady in their vocal world: Miss Bailey, Ella Fitzgerald and Sara Vaughan in their first appearance together.

Gary Coleman, young star of the Diff'rent Strokes television series, joins Miss Bailey and The Third Generation Steps in a gentle spoof of her current "school days" as a student at Georgetown University, and the Steps entertain with a dance number in their inimitable, spirited style.

Miss Bailey's reminiscences about her cooking talents lure comedian Foster Brooks onstage for a chat and a special toast. The Bellson Family — Pearl, daughter DeeDee and husband Louis — combines its considerable talents in a musical celebration as DeeDee joins her mother in a duet of Evergreen and Pearl, Louis and The Band offer their distinctive version of In the Good Ole Summertime.

Comedian Nipsey Russell is spotlighted in a nightclub sketch and singing star Billy Daniels is joined by Pearl Bailey for Memories of you. Impressionist Rich Little and Miss Bailey recreate an historic event in her recent past — a very special concert at The White House.

A group of famous performers from the stage, screen and sports arenas led by Douglas Fairbanks Jr., pay personal tribute to their friend Pearl. They are actors Jack Albertson, Beau Bridges and LeVar Burton, Dodger third baseman Ron Cey, fighter Ken Norton and former footballer Rosey Grier.

Miss Bailey and the entire cast, with the dancers, the orchestra and the Morningside High School band, assemble for a reprise of the title number from her hit Broadway tour de force, Hello, Dolly! Miss Bailey closes the show with Don't Like Goodbyes from House of Flowers.

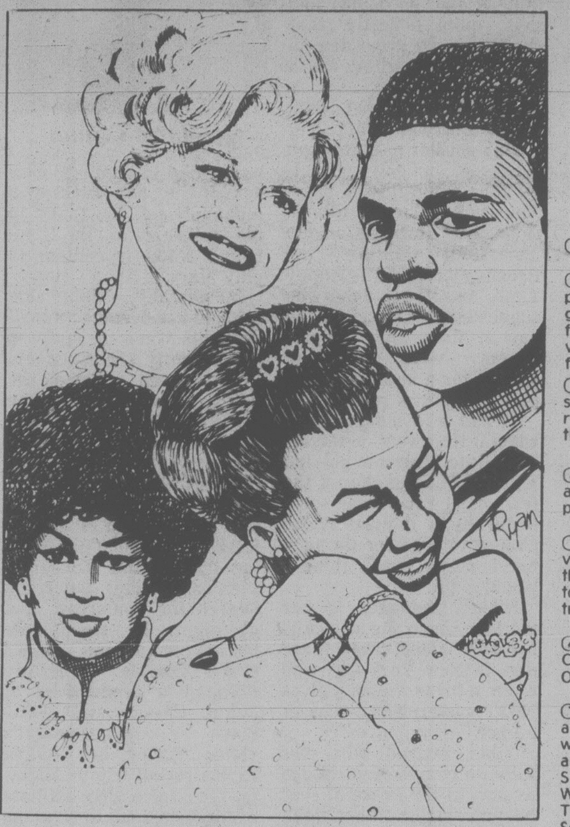
Highlights of the event will be the presentation to Hitchcock of the AFI's prestigious Life Achievement Award, honoring the veteran filmmaker for his many contributions to the film art. (See also story on page 2.)



Sensational singer Pearl Bailey (lower, right) will be honored with "The All-Star Salute to Pearl Bailey," on Wednesday, March 14. Pearl's guests will be (clockwise from lower left) Sarah Vaughan, Betty Ford and LeVar Burton.

Alfred Hitchcock: master of suspense film

Alfred Hitchcock Soon 80 Years Old

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Do you realize that on Aug. 14, I will be 80 years old? It seems unbelievable. It reminds me of a story."

"The story is this," continued Alfred Hitchcock, the master of the suspense film. "A music hall comedian was killed by shrapnel in the First World War. At his graveside gathered all of his fellow comedians including old Charlie Coburn.

"How old are you, Charlie?" one of the men asked. 'Eighty-nine,' said Charlie. The other man replied, 'It's hardly worth going home, is it Charlie?' "

Hitch chuckled with delight. He was enjoying a lunch of steak and champagne in his office suite at Universal Studios, where he has maintained his headquarters for almost 20 years. While his mind is as alert as ever, his body is not. Arthritis causes him to walk slowly with the aid of a cane.

Earlier this month he received the Lifetime of Achievement Award of the American Film Institute in a star-filled ceremony to be telecast by CBS television on March 12.

"They wanted me to climb up stairs to a podium at the dinner said Hitchcock. "I couldn't do that. An alternative might be to carry me up to the stage on a bier — not the kind with froth on the top. It might make an interesting scene: Four men staggering up the stairs with their heavy burden."

An award for achievements of a lifetime is cause for reminiscence and the British-born director recalled with utter clarity how he entered the film business.

"It was in 1920 and it happened more or less as an accident. I was an outsider, working in the advertising department of an engineering company. I was interested in motion pictures, but strangely enough, American pictures, not English."

One day I read that Paramount . . . was opening a studio in London. The first picture was to be called The Sorrows of Satan and I designed a set of titles to go with it."

In those silent-movie days, the main titles and the cards describing the action and dialogue were often handsomely designed. The American managers of the new studio liked the young man's art work and he was hired at a wage of £6 a week (then about $30.) The Hitchcock career had begun.

Hitchcock points out that his early film training was American although he worked in London. His mentors were such Hollywood directors as George Fitzmaurice, Donald Crisp and Donald Robertson.

The Pleasure Garden (1925), filmed largely in Munich, was his first film as director and he followed with The Lodger, Murder, The 39 Steps, The Lady Vanishes and other films that established the Hitchcock touch.

"My coming to Hollywood roots back to my acquaintance with Myron Selznick," said Hitchcock. "Myron said to his brother, David, 'You want to make the sinking of the Titanic? There's only one man who can do it: Alfred Hitchcock.' "

When the Titanic project itself sank, Hitchcock was assigned to Rebecca, the first of his succession of American-made masterpieces.

Despite his advancing years, Hitchcock now is planning his 54th film. It is a "good clean-cut melodrama, not a psychological story" about a British double-agent who betrays 42 of his countrymen to the East Germans.

Soap Opera Scene

Second Generation Trouper

By John Goudas

Nicolette Goulet

Tucker Smallwood

Nicolette Goulet has been playing the coveted role of Mary Ryan Fenelli in Ryan's Hope since the day after New Year's and she's just beginning to come down from cloud nine.

The pretty daughter of singer-actor Robert Goulet and his first wife flashes those gorgeous blue eyes of hers (inherited from her famous dad, no doubt) and says, quite honestly, that she still has a great deal to learn about working on a soap.

You might say that Nikki (most everyone calls her Nikki) got her part through her father, but only indirectly. John Gabriel, who plays Seneca Beaulac in Ryan's Hope, was Robert Goulet's understudy during the Broadway run of The Happy Time, and it was John who suggested Nikki read for the part of Mary when the producers were shopping around for a new actress to play the central role.

"I had watched the show when it first went on the air with Kate Mulgrew playing Mary and it was one of the few soaps I had ever seen. Naturally, I jumped at the chance to read for the part but honestly didn't think I would get it."

Nikki's manager is her mother, whom she also calls her best friend. They share digs in New York City and mom, a former model, gives Nikki pointers and discusses all her career moves.

Nikki worked with her father a couple of years ago as part of the group of four backup singers in his nightclub act.

"My dad called me one day and asked me if I wanted to work with him and after I swallowed hard, I said, 'Sure.' He then told me to meet him in San Francisco on the following day.' "

Nikki's mother urged her to go, saying she'd never forgive herself if she didn't try it. So Nikki headed for San Francisco where she rehearsed, then flew to Las Vagas on a Monday morning and opened the following Wednesday.

It was baptism by fire, to say the least, but it all worked out well. Nikki would like to continue with her singing and work up a nightclub act, but that's in the future. For the time being, Nikki is content to play Mary in Ryan's Hope.

Incidentally, Nikki said her dad has become a fan of the soap. When she spoke to him recently, she asked him if he wanted a list of the dates she would be on the show, and he said not to bother since he'd be watching anyway.

CHANNEL CHATTER. Tucker Smallwood travels the route from soaps to Shakespeare each day. During the daytime Tucker is seen as Bobby Stuart in Search for Tomorrow, and at night, he treads the boards in Joseph Papp's Black-Hispanic Repertory Company's productions of Julius Caesar and Coriolanus . . . Don Stewart's (Mike Bauer in Guiding Light) recent trip to Augusta, Ga., for a CBS affiliate event turned out to rival the plot of a Neil Simon comedy. First, he decided not to fly his own plane down from New York and was waiting at the airport when a woman with an umbrella struck him in the eye accidentally, necessitating medical attention. Then, after he arrived in Georgia, bad weather followed and Don had to wait two days before he could get back to work in Guiding Light . . . Tim Holcomb, seen regularly as Jamie Frame, son of Rachel Cory in Another World, will appear in an NBC Theatre special titled Too Far To Go airing on Monday, March 12. In the drama, based on the popular short stories of John Updike, Holcomb portrays Richie, one of the children of Richard Maple (Michael Moriarty) and Joan (Blythe Danner) . . . Elizabeth Harrower has been named head writer for Days of our Lives, it was announced by executive producer, Mrs. Ted Corday. Harrower, a veteran actress herself, who has appeared in such films as The Sterile Cuckoo and True Grit, was a staff writer on the soap for more than a year before her recent promotion . . . Maia Danziger, who appeared on Another World and Love Is a Many Splendored Thing, will make her film debut in The Magician of Lublin, based on the book by Isaac Bashevis Singer. Danziger appears with such distinguished actors as Alan Arkin, Louise Fletcher, Shelley Winters and Valerie Perrine. Maia will also be seen in the NBC Movie of the Week, Sooner or Later, airing in late March . . . Michael Ingram, the likable Vince Wolek on One Life to Live, is one of the stars in the new Broadway musical, Sarava. The role of the reserved pharmacist, Dr. Teo, in the musical is a far cry from the beer-drinking police detective soap fans have come to associate with Ingram.

PLOT PORTENTS. When it comes to Trish, David shouldn't listen to Stephanie on Days of Our Lives, but it keeps the plot boiling. Conniving Stephanie is turning into a genuine shark. Laura continues to brood about Bill and Kate having an affair. Now that Marlena and Don have tied the knot, could it be Chris and Mary's turn? But the love-hate relationship should be good for a few more run-ins. And then there's good old Amanda, back in the picture, about to leave Greg, who only lives for his work.

A child of her own could solve Lorie's problems on The Young and the Restless. She's been humiliated lately by Lance's indiscretions and Vanessa's snide remarks, but she's sweeter than ever. Figure that out! Jill's finding that she hasn't really won Stuart Brooks by marrying him, 'cause he's just not warming up. As for mother Liz, both Snapper and Greg are proud of the lady's resilience, managing to avoid a nervous breakdown after losing out to daughter Jill.

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. I recently watched the television movie "Champions: A Love Story," with James Vincent McNichol and Joy De Luc. I thought it was the greatest movie I had ever seen. I was wondering did Joy star in "The Fitzpatricks" with McNichol? Didn't she play his sister? — C.B. Fremont, Calif.

A. Joy De Luc played in one episode of "The Fitzpatricks," which featured James Vincent McNichol as a regular. She played a girl McNichol was in love with. In response to other inquiries concerning 16-year-old Joy, "Champions: A Love Story" was her first major acting role. Prior to that, she appeared in an episode of "Police Story." Also, she's no stranger to ice skating. She skated with the Ice Follies with her parents, who are now retired from the rink. She appeared in group skating numbers in the show as she did on the television show "The Peggy Flemming Special."

Q. My husband and I have a disagreement about the star Roddy McDowell. I say he played in the old series "Rawhide" as Wishbone the cook's helper. Please settle this for us. — D.H. Clovis, N.M.

A. All of the resource books detailing Roddy McDowell's long list of television and movie credits fail to include "Rawhide," either as a regular or guest star.

Q. I'm told that Leif Garrett is more of an actor than singer, although he seems to be currently enjoying success as a rock performer. What shows has he been in? — L.K. Warrington, Fl.

A. The 17-year-old Garrett began his acting career at age 5 in the motion picture "Bob and Carol and Ted and Alice." Other film credits include "Macon County Line," "Skateboard" and all three films in the "Walking Tall" series. He starred in the television series "Three for the Road" and television movie "Peter Lundy and the Medicine Hat Stallion" and guest starred in "Gunsmoke," "Apple's Way," "Cannon," "Family Affair," "The New Adventures of Wonder Woman." Most recently, he had a recurring role in the ABC series "Family."

Q. Could you please tell me where I can write to the Los Angeles Rams and their cheerleaders? — P.S. Levittsburg, Ohio.

A. Your inquiry should be sent to the Los Angeles Rams Football Club, 10271 W. Pico Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif. 90064.

Q. I was really disappointed over the latest comic book entry on television, "Captain America," which was nothing more than a rewrite of the "Six Million Dollar Man." However, Reb. Brown, who played the so-called superhero, was familiar. Has he been on television before? — B.F. Hackettstown, N.J.

A. Reb Brown has a long list of television credits, including recent appearances in Centennial, The Eddie Capra Mysteries, Fantasy Island, Happy Days, CHiPs and The Rockford Files. His feature film credits include Hardcore, Big Wednesday and Fast Break, which is scheduled for release early next year.

Q. I have heard rumors of an upcoming "Star Trek" movie. Could you possibly fill me in on some of the details if this is true? — C.C. Jefferson City, Mo.

A. A feature-length movie of "Star Trek" is currently being filmed here in Hollywood. The cast is the same as the popular television series. The story plot is being kept a top secret, even among the cast. Supposedly, the story picks up on a second "five-year mission." Producer Gene Roddenberry, who created and produced the original television series, had hoped for a late 1979 release date but filming problems may push the release date into next year.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, Prevue, Victoria Press, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4.

Newcomers Series Ends

The Present, the final episode in Imperial Oil's Newcomers series, will be telecast on Sunday, March 11 at 7 p.m. The program stars Bruno Gerussi and Martha Henry.

This film is the only contemporary story in the series and was produced in Toronto and Italy. Guido Vitelli comes to Canada in the early 1950s from the village of Opi in the Abruzzi region of central Italy. As soon as he gets work he sends for his wife and two children, Franco and Phillipo.

When he gets older, a series of events lead Guido to question whether coming to Canada was the right thing for him to do. He returns to Italy and reaches some final decisions in the village of his birth.

Polish Prince Sells 30 Million Records

By JOHN M. BOGERT

HOLLYWOOD — Boca De Santa Monica stands with its back against burned-out Mandeville Canyon.

A short time ago fire licked up the sides of the hill it stands on, up toward the huge swimming pool and tennis courts, threatening to take out the massive house itself.

Were it not for high-pressure hoses and a near miraculous shift in wind, this monument to another era would now be gone.

A century ago this was the site of the original land grant rancho house. The imposing structure that took its place has been home to Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and later, Cary Grant.

Not a shoddy heritage for the house's new owner, Bobby Vinton. The self-proclaimed Polish prince, the man whose work nobody seems to like except the 30 million people who have bought his records, now has this house standing in mute testimony to his appeal.

"It's the story of my life. Even when 'Red Roses' was big, I couldn't get a booking anywhere.

"At one point I was one record company's top seller, so they called a meeting to find out what they were doing wrong.

"What's this, Vinton is top of the charts?' "

The audacious eyes twinkle and the 11 gold records twinkle back from the walls of his study where they hang beside keys to cities and photos of him standing with other famous faces.

In one he's arm-in-arm with Richard Nixon. Over there he's chatting with Elvis and Jerry Ford, while throughout the collection one design repeats itself.

Embroidered on pillows, nailed to plaques, a 17th century Polish eagle reminds the singer where he is and, most important, who he is.

"I take this Polish prince thing very seriously. I hope I've helped bring the nations closer together. I know people who have visited Poland, and people on the street there have asked them if they knew me."

With his 1974 song, "Melody of Love,' sung in Polish and English, the press was saying Vinton was back. Vinton was saying he never left.

In fact, says the 40ish father of five, "I'm just now touching on giving more than a song. I'm finally rendering a feeling in my songs, telling a story. As a performer, I'm just beginning."

And who can doubt this still young-looking man who has made it this far with seemingly everyone in the world casting doubts in his path?

Even Life magazine titled its 1965, 15-page spread on the singer, "So Who Is This Bobby Vinton?"

"A good friend once paid me a high compliment. He said it was fantastic how I was able to sell a product that nobody really wants."

Reflecting back over the years, he says, "I've never let that negative guy inside get to me. I've always gone my own way, and it has worked out very well.

"When rock was big, I was doing love songs. When long hair was in, I had short hair. People always said I was behind the times when, in my mind, I was a nonconformist.

"No, I haven't let that guy get to me, to destroy my dreams."

Vinton says the dreams began back in Cannonsburg, Pa., when he was learning to play saxophone in his dad's band.

The accidental break came when his record company decided to drop his big band sound, saying that "boy singers were in."

"When I added up, I found they still owed me two more sides, so I recorded some of my songs, thinking I'd use the money to promote the band."

As it turned out, "Mr. Lonely" and "Roses Are Red" were on that album. Ever since, Vinton has been in the hearts of a lot of "people on the street" with songs like "Blue Velvet" and "There I've Said It Again."

"I learned a lot growing up in Cannonsburg. I learned to act the way I thought a star should act. I also learned that a lot of support can come to an entertainer from the small towns of this world."

Apparently Vinton has managed to preserve a lot of close family values he was brought up with. For one thing, he's still married to Dolly, a girl he met in first grade at Polish school.

His friends are in the music business and, since he doesn't doesn't like to bring business home, his only friends at home are his family.

"I like to spend two weeks on the road and two weeks at home, playing ball with the kids and keeping Ruffles in line," he says, staring at his playful $3 mutt.

"When I'm here, I spend all my time with them."

Bobby Vinton at his Castle

Looking At Stars

So what if his Hollywood office did have a busted door? He himself was the perpetrator. So he'd call a locksmith later. Why worry? What really mattered, E. Duke Vincent, the supervising producer of "Vega$", assured us in a long-distance call, was that a deal was something you lived up to.

He'd promised the day before to answer questions, "The first thing in the morning," about executive moves to keep upgrading the series though it has already registered — along with "Mork and Mindy" — as one of ABC's two new successes.

Duke backtracked to tell us about the door.

"Figure the three-hour time differential, it meant getting in at 7:00 a.m. I've never arrived that early before." Neither has anyone else on his staff. Since no one, including Duke, foresaw his doing the early bird turn, he never got a key.

He describes himself as the show's Ping-Pong ball shuttling from headquarter huddles with the series' overlords, Aaron Spelling and Douglas Cramer, to location shooting.

The design is well-suited to the wide frontage rear view lot and contains a range of convenience facilities for gracious living.

The garage contains ample space for the development of a workbench and tool storage for the home handyman.

All three bedrooms have excellent exposure for natural lighting and generous closet storage. The large master bedroom has a full walk-in closet, a three-piece ensuite with shower and sliding glass doors onto the rear deck. View of the enclosed garden is through the sliding doors.

A full basement, with access from the main foyer, provides abundant space for the future development of additional bedrooms and/or indoor recreation facilities.

The exterior, finished in horizontal channel siding and heavy shake roof, is subtly understated and allows for the exteror decoration in a variety of decor finishes, enabling the design to harmonize well with surrounding romes or natural environments.

John Hearn's Collectibles

Alice Fisher of Woodstock is a life long admirer and collector of the works of Gene Stratton-Porter. "I believe I have all of her books now," she says. "Some of them seem to be quite early editions and all in very good condition. I would never part up with them but it would be nice to know if they are valuable — and anything else you can tell me about Mrs. S-P herself."

Gene Stratton-Porter was one of those authors who can justly be described as 'much loved'. Her admirers are still legion and for people of my generation she remains bathed in an aura of affectionate nostalgia. Freckles, Girl of the Limberlost, and Keeper of the Bees are part of our childhood, forever treasured.

Apart from being among the most delightful of American writers she was also one of the most successful. Between 1895 and 1945, only fifty-five American books ever sold more than one million copies. Five of them came from the mellifluous pen of Gene Stratton-Porter. She was the most successful writer of her time.

She was born in Indiana on Aug. 17, 1863, married in 1886 and moved to the Limberlost Swamp two years later. Her first short story was published in 1901 and between then and when she died in a car accident in 1924 she wrote moe than 20 books, some hundreds of magazine articles and had started to produce films of her own books in Hollywood.

Her style was light romance liberally laced with popular naturalism. She was an outstanding nature photographer and would clearly have preferred to write only books of the great outdoors had not her publishers gently pointed out that the novels sold better. She therefore alternated them — ten popular novels and the rest, non-fiction works of nature.

She was one of the first great conservationists. She wrote articles attacking the slaughter of song birds to provide plumes for milliners. She was a founding member of one of the early 'Save the Elk' organizations and was alarmed at the spread of industrial pollution more than half a century before everyone else caught on. Limberlost Swamp itself was destroyed, first by oil wells and then logging.

Her writings were translated into more than a dozen languages and her readers finally totalled more than fifty million.

The sheer number of Gene Stratton-Porter's books in print precludes the possibility of them being very valuable. The very fact that they were always well loved tends to ensure that large numbers of them survive in good condition — thus there is little of the scarcity factor which leads to high prices. Nice early editions are to be found in any good used bookstore in the $5.00 to $10.00 bracket. A first edition of Freckles might fetch $50.00 - $75.00 if signed by the author. Her books of poetry are quite scarce. Jesus of the Emerald and The Fire Bird should certainly be worth $100.00. Her children's books, After The Flood and Morning Face would be in the same range.

Readers letters should be addressed to Collector's Item, c/o your newspaper, R.R. 1, Lowbanks, Ontario, N0A 1K0.

Gzowski's Spring Comes Before God's Spring

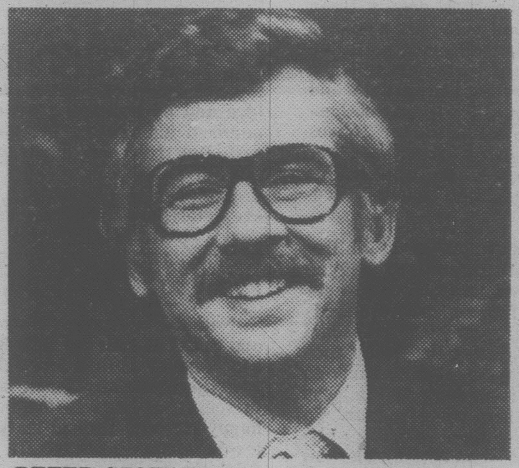
Peter Gzowski's Spring Tonic is a big paperback scrapbook of writings about spring. It contains the predictable smattering of excerpts from old material — everything from Catherine Parr Trail to Ray Guy — but there's also a generous helping of new pieces penned especially for it. Some of these are by established writers like Jack Hodgins who responded to Gzowski's personal invitation; others are by unknowns who deserve not to be, and who were galvanized into action by Gzowski's public appeal for contributions. (He advertised the project via radio and weekly newspapers.)

He decided to "do" the book, Gzowski tells us, "because of my own need to dream" and partly as "therapy" when he realized that life as a late-night television host was not for him. Besides, he adds, "(Canadians) need spring. We need it desperately and, usually, we need it before God is willing to give it to us." Spring Tonic is meant to bring spring early for most of us and make it more enjoyable for those fortunate few who already have it. Happily, contrary to all expectations when I opened the book, it should do just that.

Spring can be such a twee subject, what with flutes tootling, lambs bleating and brooks babbling all over the place. Spring a la Gzowski, though, leans closer to whimsy than gush. This brief poem by Stuart Richardson is typical: "Spring has come and it will bring/Happiness and everything/Girls in fashions new and old/Girls in shorts both brief and bold/Side to side my head I swing/I must not miss anything/Once I did this very quickly/Now my neck is old and crickly."

There's also an earnestness to Canadian appreciation of spring that's positively touching. ("In England, spring means the rain that comes down will be less cold," explains Don Harron. "In California, spring doesn't mean a goddam thing; in Canada, it means the end is near, the ordeal is over.") Indeed, so deeply does that first green shoot touch the chilblained Canadian psyche that we seem to find our natural reactions less embarrassing if we laugh at them. "Spring is something Canadians must learn to live with,' writes Gary Lautens. "Just buy yourself some open-toed snowshoes and cope." Or, "Spring . . . in Saskatchewan, a single day tucked in between winter of one day and summer of the next. But regardless of time or place, on that day the poetic sap begins to flow." (Paul Hiebert, of course, in "Sarah Revisited.")

Spring Tonic is anything but a collection of tired cliches. There's Stephen Leacock, for example, explaining the "signs of spring that every sensible man respects and recognizes. He sees the oyster disappear from the club bill-of-fare, and knows that winter is passing . . . he notes the first timid appearance of the asparagus just peeping out of its melted butter," etc. There are recipes for rhubarb and asparagus, a selection of spring tune-up exercises illustrated with a photo of brave people like John Candy and Barbara Hamilton in leotards and tights, and a scientific explanation of what causes spring by Ian McGregor of the Toronto Planetarium. I especially liked a poem by a Lake Wilcox, Ontario schoolboy which ended, "Ding! Ding!/Spring comes out dancing. It's Spring with an uppercut/Winter's down. He's out cold! The fight is all over! The Winner: Jim Spring!"



PETER GZOWSKI . . . more whimsy than gush

There's an intriguing article by Sheila Fischman, who is best known as a translator but is also literary editor of the Montreal Star. Gzowski had asked her for help in selecting spring material from the literature of Quebec, and Fischman replied that it was puzzlingly difficult to find any. Winter, yes, everywhere, but Spring? (One explanation may lie in the contrast between the Roman Catholic emphasis on the Crucifixion and the Protestant emphasis on the Resurrection, as symbolized by the empty cross. The two notable exceptions Fischman found — Klein and Layton — also wrote at a significant distance from the surrounding Catholic culture.)

There's a nice balance between fiction and non-fiction, poetry and graphics, and two of the best pieces are short articles by relative unknowns. ("Spring Cleaning" by Jean McKay, and "Three Feet Deep in Dawson City" by John Burnsie, on pages 112-114.)

There's also a lot of W. O. Mitchell and none of F. P. Grove or Roderick Haig-Brown, and a silly interview with Margaret Atwood that's below par, but not to worry. Nobody ever claimed that a spring tonic has to taste good all the way down. It's the invigorating overall effect that counts.

Cheever at His Best in Short Stories

By JACK SCOTT

In the late lamented series between the National Hockey League and the Soviet Union, an announcer attributed our first and only victory — somewhat prematurely, as it turned out — to the "bench strength" of the western team.

It's a familiar expression in team sports, meaning that there's a pool of talent to be drawn upon at all times, a condition that probably best describes the eventual winners.

The phrase may seem inappropriate as it applies to literature. Yet it seems curiously apt in applying to John Cheever, and the only effective way to describe this massive and superb collection of his short stories.

Cheever is a writer, has been, in fact, for 30 years with The New Yorker, who is never at a loss for the stuff of greatness. If a plot doesn't quite work out, he scores by the sheer ability to master the English language. If the writing itself may seem occasionally uneven — and it rarely does — he captivates by an understanding of the human condition that is, perhaps, his greatest asset. More than any other fiction writer he can be said to have one-man bench strength.

These talents are stretched to their limit in novels. His recent best-selling Falconer was a disappointment to this reviewer — though the reviewer seems to have been a minority of one — and may, indeed, rank with John Le Carre's The Honourable Schoolboy as one of the more dubious over-inflated, over-praised literary successes of recent times.

THE STORIES OF JOHN CHEEVER. Random House. $19.50.

JOHN CHEEVER . . . shock effects

True or not, Cheever is magnificent in the shorter form. These 61 stories over the past three decades cannot be faulted on any account. Not since E. B. White's Essays has there been a more rewarding collection.

What's particularly interesting about this treasury, more so than in the five compilations of Cheever's stories in the past, is that it reveals something of the thought process that presages any actual writing

Cheever could never be described as a formula writer, yet there is, in most of these stories, a brutal, sometimes comical violence that's strangely at odds with Cheever's disciplined, urbane style. In by far the largest percentage of these stories there is sudden death, terminal confrontation, and general mayhem calculated to shock the startled reader. Cheever is clearly a gentle, tender man. Yet there has never been a more diabolical observer of the human condition.

One is that most of these stories are set in suburbia. Cheever is known, indeed, as a chronicler of the middle and upper-middle classes. The stability and security of family life hermetically removed from the chaos of the city, happiness and martinis among the hedges, is established right from the beginning. Yet any Cheever reader will know that it is all a charade. Behind those solid oaken doors there is infidelity, incest, vicious plotting and a whole lot of misery. There are always clouds over this corner of paradise. Every cloud has a black lining.

Then, too, Cheever is as fastidious as Alfred Hitchcock in establishing a mood and a setting for tragedy. He is, in particular, the master of meteorology and the behavior of the elements is a much a part of a Cheever story as the behavior of his doomed cast.

Thus, in a typical Cheever story called "O Youth and Beauty!" (an ex-hurdler whose alcoholic vanity is to vault over furniture is shot dead by his wife, perhaps accidentally) the author sets the perfect scene for homicide: "Then it is a summer night, a wonderful summer night. The passengers on the eight-fifteen see Shady Hill — if they notice it at all — in a bath of placid golden light. The noise of the train is muffled in the heavy foliage, and the long car windows look like a string of lighted aquarium tanks before they flicker out of sight. Up on the hill, the ladies say to one another, 'Smell the grass! Smell the trees!' The Farleys are giving another party, and Henry had hung the sign, Whiskey Gulch, from the rose arbor, and is wearing a chef's white hat and an apron. His guests are still drinking, and the smoke from his meat fire rises, on the windless evening, straight up into the trees . . ."

And so Cheever prepares the reader ever so gently for the lethal shot.

Since these stories have been collected over such a long span of years, it might be expected that they would vary in quality. After all, Cheever is now close to 68 years of age. Yet with the possible exception of "Artemis, The Honest Well Digger", a long fable strangely out of character, the writing and plot are as impeccable as they ever were.

Many readers will have fond memories of the earlier Cheever and he, himself, has a soft spot for nostalgia.

"These stories," he writes in an introduction that's as entertaining as his tales, "seem at times to be stories of a long-lost world when the city of New York was still filled with a river light, when you heard the Benny Goodman quartet from a radio in the corner stationery store, and when almost everybody wore a hat. Here is the last of that generation of chain smokers who woke the world in the morning with their coughing, who used to get stoned at cocktail parties and perform obsolete dance steps like 'the Cleveland Chicken', sail for Europe on ships, who were truly nostalgic for love and happiness, and whose gods were as ancient as yours and mine, whoever you are."

Whether the reader remembers those distant times or not, this is an altogether wonderful collection of a master of his medium. It will give genuine pleasure to everyone who appreciates bench strength.

Betty Bacall's Bumpy Ride

By ANTHONY JENKINS

"Fasten your seat-belts," proclaims one of the songs from Lauren Bacall's hit musical, Applause, "it's gonna be a bumpy ride." Her life has been like that, too, since she shot to the top at 20 in To Have And Have Not. From then on, her career has had its bumps, more downs than ups, and since 1957 she has had to live a legend, as the widowed Mrs. Bogart.

Her autobiography, funny, human and, in places, unusually moving, describes the plane ride, for us and for herself: "Maybe it would help me to discover something about myself, to add it all up. What I am — and why. How I got there."

She survived because she had roots, a close-knit family and a unique marriage, a sense of herself and the theatre. "I have a contribution to make. I am not just taking up space in this life. I can add something to the lives I touch. I don't like everything about myself, and I'll never be satisfied, but nobody's perfect."

The Bacalls were Rumanian Jewish, first generation immigrant New Yorkers. When she was six, her parents separated, and her mother, with the clan behind her, battled on. It was she who gave Betty, as she then was, her values. She taught her "character," a sense of right and wrong, that "you worked for a living and you worked hard. Accomplishment."

Her mother's standards, spirit, and sense of humor supported her daughter through dancing and theatre school. They were there to fall back on when, in the first years of the war, she scraped a living as a fashion model or a theatre usher, tried to catch the eye of directors by selling Actors' Cue in Sardi's doorway, and won her first break in a play which folded on the road.

So that when Hollywood producers scrambled for the girl in the pages of Harper's Bazaar, she was able to hold on to herself, despite her youthful naivete and Howard Hawks, who molded her into his personal image of sophisticated and provocative romance, or despite (and because of) Humphrey Bogart, 25 years her senior. Vaulted to fame, head over heels in love, she never quite forgot who she was and emerged from it all as a fighter.

That self-knowledge enlivens almost every page of her book. Over the years she has not lost her spontaneity towards life, her curiosity and enthusiasm for people and places. She still remembers what it was like to be a schoolgirl sitting terrified on the edge of a chair in Betty Davis' hotel room. The famous are now her friends, yet even her most casual references catch their ordinary selves as well as their glamor. And for certain parts of her life she retains an uncanny, well-nigh total recall.

Two-thirds of the book details those early years, her first film, her romance and marriage to Bogart. Armored in the critical perspective of her mature self, she is able to re-capture what she felt then, and her account is dramatic, loving, and honest. Without being mawkish, she relives the minutes of Bogart's last illness, her adoration and despair, her concern for their children's loss, her own indebtedness:

"And Bogie, with his great ability to love, never suppressing me, helping me to keep my values straight in a town where there were few, forcing my standards higher — again the stress on personal character, demonstrating the importance of the quality of life, the proper attitude to work . . . to risk something in life, was more important then being a star. To never sell your soul — to have self-esteem — to be true — was most important of all."

Until that marriage, his fourth, Bogart had been a hard drinker and a lonely man. She gave him youth, children, and a sense of wonder. He gave her wisdom and devotion, opening to her a select circle of friends whose mutual respect for work tied them together. Yet throughout their 11 years as "Slim" and "Steve," he never let her take him for granted; they preserved each other's boundaries.

Picking up the pieces after Bogart's death, she turned for support to Frank Sinatra. Twenty years later, she sees now that she was demanding more than he could give. But at the time, she was confused and hurt by the way he backed off from any commitment:

"Actually, Frank did me a favor — he saved me from the disaster our marriage would have been. The truth is he was probably smarter than I: he knew it couldn't work. But the truth also is that he behaved like a complete shit. He was too cowardly to tell the truth — that it was just too much for him, that he'd found he couldn't handle it. I would have understood (I hope). Well, he's paid for his licks in his life — okay, it's his life — but why the hell did I have to pay for them too?"

Still later, there was Jason Robards. Like Bogie he was a drinker, but she thought she could cure him by giving him love and by mothering his children. She admired his talents, his generosity and zest. But their marriage foundered from the start. He was erratic and kept on drinking; she began to grow into someone she detested, until it became a matter of survival, for herself and their son, to get out cleanly and rationally, despite hurt feelings.

Now that's all over, Bacall looks back and finds the man she once thought him to be: "Jason was in A Moon for the Misbegotten on Broadway. I took Sam (their son) to see it. Jason was brilliant. I was so happy for him. He had learned a terrible lesson along the way. He had stopped drinking, his marriage was good, he had one new daughter, and another baby on the way . . . At last we became good friends. Whenever he'd come to get Sam for a weekend, dinner, whatever, Jason and I would sit and talk about work, about life. He was a good man — a wonderful man . . . He was worth the time, even the pain, invested."

Once more she is "by myself": two marriages lie behind her, the family's older generation is dead; Bogie's children have their own lives to make, Sam is still to care for. Writing the book, she is "warmed and strengthened" by the memory of her family and by the fact of the special people in her life, like Katherine Hepburn, Spencer Tracy, the Nivens, the Kennedys, Adlai Stevenson, John Huston. Yet the legend of the past is also still a burden, and she wonders about her children's lives and her own future.

BACALL . . . life as a legend

Presented without self-pity, the trials and joys have all played their part in the making of a unique personality; Bacall is "by myself" in that sense, too. Perhaps her new success as a writer will now propel her career upward and allow her to be accepted as herself. Meanwhile, she remains buoyant, able still to laugh in Fortune's face, as she ends on a line worthy of "the look" that first made her famous: "I'm open to suggestions."

A Sense Of Tension

By WALT KELLYTHORNE

Susan Musgrave's ninth book, A Man To Marry A Man To Bury, is an excellent presentation of a problem every writer as prolific as Musgrave must sooner or later face. Most simply put, the problem is one of over-abundance: this collection would possess far more power than it does if many of the poems in it hadn't been included. A sense of haste intrudes, as if the poet wanted to make a poem simply to add to the thickness of the pile. What for? Musgrave's best work has always been a delight, and not because of its quantity.

Perhaps she and other Canadian poets — and American poets too — might consider Tomas Transtromer, the Swedish poet who published only 50 poems from 1954 to 1962. There is no fat in his work; consequently, we are unforgettably aware of its power. What more could any poet wish for?

That said by way of an introduction, there's still plenty in Susan Musgrave's latest collection that merits any reader's effort.

"Fishing On A Snowy Evening" for example — too long to be quoted here, and it should be encountered entire — perfectly maintains this tension throughout. Its even tone exactly suits its scene and action, and the picture developed in the poem, though almost devoid of actual physical details, may remain in the reader's senses long after a first reading. Further readings will only serve to sharpen the palpable impact of this poem. "Fishing On A Snowy Evening" seems a perfect poem, one that any poet would be proud to call their own.

"When You Lie Down, Lie With Me" is another example of the tension Musgrave manages to find and utilize in many of her poems:

This is real.
This is living together . . .

This is trying to keep warm.
This is trying to stay alive . . .

Then, near the end of the poem, the tension is briefly relaxed for a moment of movement and possible resolution — but only into, finally, an inexorable continuing of the tension that first animated the scene. Musgrave catches an aspect of reality here that anyone who has ever lived with someone else can feel.

And so she does also in "The Embalmer's Art", ". . . not a poem for just anybody. No, in fact, it is meant/for my family. It is a poem to strangers, then,/ on the occasion of Christmas."

There isn't a wasted word in this poem, and its conclusion is as pointed and effective as any advanced by Sylvia Plath — without, like Plath, belaboring the obvious anger and sorrow the situation inspires.

"Wedding Song', "North Beach Birth", "The Angel-Maker" — these are all fine examples of Musgrave's best.

"The Angel-Maker" is a hauntingly beautiful account by the practitioner of a trade that in itself could hardly be called beautiful. Direct and lyrical at the same time, "The Angel-Maker" perfectly captures the essence of a scene many of us might recognize:

"Look up at the stars, those elements of/augery. This child would be born wanting —/ sweet shock for his indigent father . . ./ Relax, please, this is no time for moral prudery."

Witches, lovers, absent friends, times of grief and times of wonder — all find life and echo somewhere in this collection.

What doesn't, happily enough, find life or echo here is the overworked imagery of native myth that Musgrave has given us so often before.

Her use of that imagery — and other poets' use of it — often seemed spurious, the effort of a myth-less people who still felt uneasy with the place that they and their forebears took from its original inhabitants — and who still, perhaps, felt guilty about the methods used in that taking and about the place to which the natives were consigned.

But taking someone else's imagery and myth is hardly the way to ease, or a guilt-free life. Making your own myths — or, at least, making your own imagery to illuminate what turn out to be our common myths — anounces at least the beginning of ease.

That beginning may be found in these poems.

Two Courageous Exposes Of the Shadowy World of Jimmy Hoffa

Jimmy Hoffa seemed always to be in the news, yet despite his notoriety the long-time undisputed leader of the giant Teamsters Union somehow managed to remain a shadowy figure as far as the general public was concerned.

We knew that a congressional committee and the FBI tried to nail him for corruption and for dealings with the Mafia but, like the Teamsters who revered him, we wanted to believe he was being victimized for being a thorn in the Establishment's flesh, and so we gave him the benefit of the doubt. We knew he was jailed for jury-tampering and income tax evasion but the charges could have been trumped-up. And we were told that he disappeared without trace, but we knew such a thing was impossible and that sooner or later he would surface and become more powerful than ever.

Few knew just how corrupt this charismatic leader really was or how, to satisfy his insatiable craving for power, he had battled his way to the top of the largest and most important union in the U.S. (with many members in Canada) and in the course of his rough and bloody ascent had entered into alliance and into combat with America's most influential and notorious elements — politicians, labor leaders, business tycoons and the kings of the underworld.

Fewer still understood how he was toppled from power or what steps he planned to take to regain it — steps that so threatened the power of the mobsters that his murder became inevitable.

Certainly, I was unaware of these things, and a great deal more, until I read The Hoffa Wars, a bizarre and engrossing account of the rise and fall of one of America's most controversial and sinister figures.

The young author, journalist Dan E. Moldea, referred to by colleagues as a guerrilla writer, spent four gruelling and frightening years relentlessly pursuing the terrifying facts about Hoffa and those who surrounded him. Apart from reading voluminous documents and tracking down every possible lead, Moldea questioned government agents, union leaders, businessmen, mobsters and Teamsters; and among the hundreds interviewed several later became victims of the underworld's ceaseless campaign to keep secret the truth about Hoffa. And the author's own life was threatened several times.

Right from the start of his turbulent career Hoffa used strong-arm tactics in the pursuit of his goal: first he employed a gang of bully-boys to establish his ascendancy in his Detroit local; then he used small-time criminals to terrorize employers into signing crippling contracts, which gave him a worshipping membership, enlarged his power-base, and compelled the union leadership to notice him.

As he moved up the ladder, Hoffa allied himself with mobsters to whom he allotted areas of jurisdiction with free access to local union funds. In return, they supported his climb to power. When he attained the presidency he found himself in control of a union pension fund exceeding $2 billion, and the power to bestow and take away nominal titles that carried enormous salaries and a princely life-style. The recipients were required solely to silence dissent and maintain Hoffa in power.

There were some rebels in the ranks, honest Teamsters who didn't like what was going on, but they could be easily handled. On the whole, everyone was happy. Union rank-and-file members kept getting bigger pay-packets; rich mobsters had a legitimate front for their nefarious activities; and Jimmy was king — an absolute monarch, revered by his subjects, feared by other union leaders, relied on by the Mafia, and protected by politicians who were on his regular payroll, as were some wives, sons and nephews of his chief courtiers.

In sole command of the huge pension fund was a crook named Allen Dorfman. Traditionally, pension funds are invested in bonds and gilt-edged securities; Teamster funds were 'loaned' to mobsters for wild speculation in real estate, plush golf clubs, hotels, casinos (like Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas), and other such ventures. When the venture failed the loan was written-off; when it succeeded, token repayments were made. The result of all this is that the pension fund is expected to be bankrupt in four or five years' time.

All this is bad enough, but Moldea doesn't stop there. His chilling revelations and disclosures — names, place and details — many of them told in the words of the participants themselves, include Hoffa's involvement in dirty tricks in the highest places.

Link With Ruby

For example, after the Cuban Revolution when the mob were evicted from the island, thereby losing their best gambling and heroin connections, mob leaders co-operated with the CIA in the plot to assassinate Fidel Castro. The middleman between the CIA and the American underworld was Jimmy Hoffa — who had used the Teamsters Union's financial machinery for arms sales to both sides in the Cuban Revolution.

There is solid evidence, Moldea shows, that Hoffa and two of his criminal associates — three of the most important targets for criminal prosecution by the Kennedy administration — had discussions with their subordinates about murdering President Kennedy. Associates of Hoffa and the others were in direct contact with Jack Ruby, the Dallas night-club owner who killed Lee Harvey Oswald, the so-called "lone assassin" of the president.

Some idea of the power wielded by Hoffa and his friends can be gauged by the fact that members of the Warren Commission, which investigated Kennedy's assassination, had knowledge of much of this information but chose not to follow it up.

The story gets worse and worse. When the awful Nixon came to power, Hoffa was in jail and anti-Hoffa Mafia forces had gained ascendency. Teamsters boss Frank Fitzsimmons, who was supposed to have kept the president's seat warm for Hoffa's return, turned on his former boss, allied himself with the new Mafia leaders (by giving them free access to union funds) and persuaded Nixon to de-claw Hoffa.

This wasn't difficult to achieve. Nixon agreed to pardon Hoffa and to make the pardon conditional on Hoffa not becoming involved in any union affairs until 1980. In return, Fitzsimmons engineered a dirty tricks campaign against Senator Edward Kenndy, Nixon's potential challenger; Dorfman dipped into the pension fund and contributed $100,000 to Nixon, through John Mitchell, the president's corrupt attornay-general; and when the Watergate burglars began blackmailing the White House, the Mafia came through with a million dollars in hush money — delivery arranged by Fitzsimmons and Dorfman.

If Hoffa had accepted defeat he would have survived, and it is unlikely that this book would ever have been written. But, of course, he didn't. Having for decades left a trail of countless battered heads and ruined lives of Teamster rebels who had dared to challenge him, Hoffa now devised a plan to gather rebel support by promising that when re-elected president he would get rid of the criminals, run a clean union, and dedicate himself to the workers.

In their desperation, the rebels believed him. So did Fitzsimmons. And so did the Mafia. By being naive enough to think that he could dispose of the Mafia just like that, Jimmy Hoffa signed his own death warrant. And Moldea tells us who carried out the sentence, where and how the murder was performed, and why no trace was, or ever will, be found of the body. Case closed.

HOFFA . . . murder 'inevitable'

The above is merely the barest outline of some of the revelations contained in this sensational book, which is not only a triumph of investigative reporting but also a chilling reminder that a country's rulers are not always who we think they are.

Terrible Legacy

Moldea worked long and hard to produce this documentary account of a man who left a terrible legacy, not only in political corruption and worker exploitation but also in decades of bloodshed among rival mobs struggling for control of legitimate businesses and the narcotics trade. It is understandable that he should want to include every scrap of pertinent information he so laboriously gleaned, and this he seems to have done.

It may appear churlish to criticize a courageous young man who risked his life to uncover truth, but I must fault him on this because by including so much he has made a complex story indigestible. A more experienced writer would have known that drastic editing would hve heightened impact and not confused the reader to the point of often losing his attention. As it is, The Hoffa Wars is tough to read and demands enormous concentration. But, believe me, it's well worth making the effort.

If you're not prepared to make such an effort there is, fortuitously, an alternative to the The Hoffa Wars. The Teamsters, by Steven Brill, is less demanding on the reader, and almost equally illuminating.

Brill, a contributing editor and law columnist for Esquire, must have also amassed a wealth of material during the 18 months he spent doing leg-work and poring over documents. But he sensibly distanced himself from his notes in order to gain perspective and so realized that as the cast of characters is inseparable — their paths criss-cross all the time — it would be more effective to narrow the cast. And that is what he did.

Pride, Revenge

The cast includes Jimmy Hoffa, Jr., lawyer son of the murdered union boss, who is so tormented by instincts of pride and revenge that he cannot see the defects in his father's character.

There is also Tony Provenzano, mobster leader of the Teamsters in New Jersey, recently convicted of arranging the murder of a union rival; Ron Carey, scrupulously honest president of a Teamster local in New York who, because of his honesty, cannot move up in the hierarchy; and Allen Dorfman, the pension fund manipulator mentioned earlier, who is now scared because government pressure and publicity have limited his usefulness to the underworld.

We also meet a 57-year-old driver who is making $28,000 a year and thinks the union has done great things for him; and a well paid 60-year-old Teamster warehouseman who is a bitter Teamster dissident. We are also introduced to Harold Gibbons, Hoffa's top aide, and Jackie Presser, who hopes to become the next Teamster president while knowing that he seeks not a throne but an electric chair.

Dominating the book is Frank Fitzsimmons, the union's general president, chosen by Hoffa as his stand-in when he went to prison because he was a non-entity. When Hoffa entered a room he would strip off his jacket and let it fall; one of errand-boy Fitzsimmons' jobs was to catch it before it reached the floor. But the inoffensive, nervous Fitzsimmons turned out to be a wolf in sheep's clothing by virtually handing over the union to the mob — which solved the Jimmy Hoffa problem for ever.

But those who play with fire invariably get burned, and now Fitzsimmons himself is the target of government investigations and the victim of disloyalty among his ambitious underlings.

The Teamsters is an effective book, cleverly crafted and easy to read. And it does contain some information that is not to be found in The Hoffa Wars. To gain the full flavor of the Teamster and Hoffa stories it is profitable to read both books, but if I had to make a choice I would come down heavily in favor of The Hoffa Wars, which despite the fault of over-crowding the narrative, remains a major work and a minor masterpiece of investigative journalism.

Michael Moriarty and Blythe Danner portray the seemingly serene young couple, Richard and Joan Maple, in this flashback scene, but their 20-year marriage is breaking up in "Too Far to Go", Monday, March 12 at 9 p.m. on channels 5 and 13.

Updike Dramatized In Too Far to Go

Too Far to Go , a drama based on 10 of the popular Maples short stories by John Updike, will air Monday, March 12, on NBC.

Michael Moriarty stars as Richard Maple and Blythe Danner co-stars as his wife, Joan, in the story of a contemporary suburban couple whose marriage is disintegrating. Also starring are Glenn Closs as Rebecca, Ken Kercheval as Jack Dennis, Josef Somner as Henry Mills and Kathryn Walker as Marion Sales.

Moriarty explained his view of Richard Maple: "I play a very contemporary man with comtemporary problems. Richard Maple is part cad, part human being, part baby, part mature understanding parent, part gifted artist. His way with words is marvelous and captivating to those around him. But he has a great sin: pride."

In the story, Richard and his wife, Joan, realize their marriage is falling apart, and they can't find ways to halt the disintegration. They reach the point where they plan to break the news of their pending separation to their children.

Moriarty said of the couple's relationship: "They are hurting one another with affairs. They are terrified and don't seek help. It's their pride which is causing the breakdown and which prevents them from seeking the assistance they need so badly."

The actor spent 27 days before the cameras on location in New York City and in Stony Brook, Long Island. "I loved it," he said. "If you have a script as good as this one, you trust it. I felt very comfortable in the part. Most important, I think Updike has written as honestly and truly out of his insights and experiences as it is possible for a human being to do."

Elizabeth Swados, the winner of two Obie awards, who wrote, composed, directed and choreographed the Broadway musical, "Runaways", has created the original music for "Too Far to Go". This is the first time Swados has composed a score for a special on a commercial television network.

Swados is now working on "Wonderland," a musical version of "Alice in Wonderland," recently presented in a concert version in New York City with Meryl Streep as Alice. Swados appeared on PBS in "The Girl With the Incredible Feeling," which is the title of her autobiographical book.

The "NBC Theatre" special is the second in this series of major dramatic programs. "NBC Theatre" was announced last July by Robert E. Mulholland, President, NBC Television Network, who said: ". . . it is our intentiion that 'NBC Theatre' will become the signature for exceptional television drama for years to come."

Good Looks and Voice Help

Now It's Variety for Anton

By DAN LEWIS

Susan Anton is a stunning and statuesque young lady, five feet 11 inches tall, who has exploded into the public eye with the new NBC series, "Cliffhangers".

As a high school student at Yucaipa High School in Oak Glen, Calif., she won the Miss Redlands beauty title. She began to sing and, after high school, launched her professional career.

That 1976 commercial opened up many doors. Susan's up-and-coming singing act got booked into top clubs, mostly as a supporting act, in Las Vegas, Reno and Lake Tahoe. Next, she co-starred in a Mel Tellis summertime variety series on television. Critics gave her great looks and her talent equal applause.

Now, Miss Anton has a very heady future. Not one, but two series, back-to-back on NBC, will keep her star glittering from February through May in an extraordinary run.

Susan's segment of the Tuesday night NBC series "Cliffhangers" is titled "Stop Susan Williams." It's a "Perils of Pauline"-type adventure, which will keep her running for 10 weeks.

Susan Anton will switch from her new NBC series "Cliffhangers" into a May variety show, also on NBC.

When her "Cliffhangers" stint winds down, Susan will display her versatility as she swings into a four-week variety show on the same network, starting in May.

She also has the starring role in the feature film "Goldengirl" to be released this spring. In it, she portrays an athlete contending for an Olympic berth.

For Susan, it is the best of all worlds, variety, television and films. She is called upon to sing, dance and act.

She talks easily about her current activity, and her future. She reveals that Fred Silverman, the new president of NBC, was directly involved in her commitment to NBC.

"Fred Silverman called my husband (Jack Stein, who is also her manager) and said 'I will personally watch over Susan's career'," she reports.

"Fred loves variety," she notes.

"I'll do just 20 minutes each week (in 'Cliffhangers') for 10 weeks, and then I'm off. I come right back with four variety shows, and the public will see a different Susan Anton. The 'Cliffhangers' series will give me high visibility for the variety show."

She says she wants her variety hour to be different than those which have surfaced, and then faltered in recent years. Variety has not had a good run on television lately.

"They've all had that sameness about them," she contends.

She intends to give her show situation appeal, surprises each week, especially a different set of guests than now travel from one variety show to another.

"I'd love to get Cary Grant to do a soft shoe; and Clint Eastwood to sing, and maybe Johnny Carson to play drums," she says wistfully. With her looks and figure, she might just bewitch Grant, Eastwood and Carson onto her show.

Susan is the daughter of a sergeant in the sheriff's office of San Bernadino County, and she has three brothers and sisters — all tall. Her father is 6-foot-2, and her mother 5-foot-10.

She met her husband when she went to the William Morris Agency, seeking representation. She was interviewed by Jack Stein.

"I figured I'd better get to know him better," she recalls. So, two days later, she called him, and asked him for a date.

Shortly thereafter, he became her manager. That was five years ago. Two years later, they were married.

Writing on Walls

The Talking Walls of Pompeii, a witty and unusual approach to the ancient Pompeiian story told through the city's own words — its graffiti — airs on Channel 9, Saturday, March 10, at 2:30 p.m. Actor John Forsythe hosts.

The Talking Walls of Pompeii focuses on these wall-writings to weave a picture of the cultural, social and political fabric once experienced in the earthy Roman seaport. The graffiti touched on almost every aspect of life in Pompeii: debts, complaints, endearments, advertising and even personal messages. The writing on the walls reveals the Pompeiians' favorite entertainments — acting, pantomime, gymnastics, and the violent, fight-to-death sport of the gladiators. It also reflects the role of the public baths as a place to relax, meet friends and conduct business. The graffiti even offers insights into women's roles.
